Chusin Setiadikara

Chusin Setiadikara, an Indonesian painter, is known for his realist style with a photographic approach. Born in Bandung in 1949, Chusin found a lasting muse in the Kintamani Market of Bali, which frequently appears in his work. After moving from Bandung to Bali in 1987, he became deeply connected to the island's culture. Over the years, he has participated in numerous local and international exhibitions.

His achievements include the "Excellent Work" award at the 2nd Beijing International Art Biennale (2005), and having a painting Kintamani II added to the Fukuoka Asian Art Museum's collection in 1999. He also held an exhibition at Selasar Sunaryo Art Space in 2019.

He captures his subjects through photography before translating them onto canvas using charcoal or oil paint. In his painting “Kids of Kintamani”, he depicts five children, four in black and white and one in color, with expressions that feel remarkably lifelike. His signature style often combines charcoal drawings with oil painting, creating a collage-like effect that sometimes hints at hidden meanings within the composition.

Jumaldi Alfi

Jumaldi Alfi is a painter known for exploring ideas and themes in sequential works. A graduate of the Institut Seni Indonesia (ISI) in Yogyakarta, he is also a member of the renowned Kelompok Seni Rupa Jendela (Jendela Art Group), one of Indonesia's leading contemporary art collectives. Alfi has exhibited his work in various places, including Jakarta, Singapore, and Amsterdam.

In "Rajah Mantra No. VI", Alfi presents a grid of nine squares in varying shades of pink, each filled with intricate calligraphic markings that resemble ancient scripts or symbolic writing. These markings evoke a sense of mysticism, with the repeated symbols resembling a mantra or spiritual chant. Dark, stone-like objects placed in three of the squares add a grounding, mysterious element to the composition. The title itself, Rajah Mantra, reinforces the spiritual essence of the work, with "rajah" symbolizing a sacred or powerful symbol and "mantra" referring to a chant.

His ability to build a narrative into his artwork has earned him several awards, including being a finalist at the 10th and 5th Philip Morris Indonesian Art Awards and receiving Best Painting honors from ISI Yogyakarta in 2009.

Alit Sembodo

The painting “Digital Season” by Alit Sembodo is a complex, chaotic scene filled with dense layers of intertwined human figures, vehicles, and kites. The figures, rendered in intricate linework, seem to be in various stages of motion—running, falling, pushing carts, and riding bicycles—creating a sense of frenzied activity across the canvas. The black background adds to the intensity, making the pale, skeletal-like figures stand out dramatically.

A few pops of color break through the monochromatic chaos: brightly colored kites and objects such as vehicles in yellow, blue, and pink appear scattered among the mass of figures, drawing the viewer's attention amidst the swirling action. At the bottom of the painting, a bold red stripe stretches across, grounding the tumultuous scene above and creating a stark contrast with the rest of the composition.

The overwhelming density of figures, combined with the title Digital Season, suggests a commentary on the fast-paced, hyper-connected nature of the digital age. The artist depicts modern life as a relentless swirl of activity, where individuals are lost in the overwhelming flow of information and digital interactions.

As a contemporary Indonesian artist, Alit Sembodo is known for his distinctive style, reflecting themes of human destruction, chaos, and apocalyptic imagery. His works are held by collectors in Taiwan, Singapore, and various European countries. Notable awards he has received include the Pratisara Affandi Adhi Karya (1999), Indonesian Art Awards (1999, 2000), and the Philip Morris ASEAN Art Awards (1999, 2000). Though he passed away in 2003 at the age of 28, his work remains impactful and sought after due to its limited availability.

Galam Zulkifli

The painting titled “Illusion Series” by Galam Zulkifli presents an intriguing visual effect that plays with the viewer’s perception. The artist himself was born in Sumbawa, West Nusa Tenggara, graduated from IKIP Yogyakarta and has received significant recognition for his artistic contributions.

This artwork consists of two overlapping faces, one male and one female, seamlessly intertwined through a series of vertical lines. These lines fragment the portraits, creating a sense of distortion and movement as if the two figures are merging into one while remaining distinct. The alternating stripes add a dynamic optical illusion that shifts as you focus on different parts of the painting, causing the two faces to appear to fade into each other, almost like a visual echo.

This exploration of duality—of merging identities—suggests themes of ambiguity, perception, and the fluidity of how we see others and ourselves.

Teguh Ostenrik

In 1992, Teguh Ostenrik traveled to Paris to participate in a group exhibition at La Boule. This opportunity allowed him to spend three months in a workshop in the Latin Quarter, leading to the creation of his "Dans Paris" series. The paintings in this series are defined by Ostenrik's use of layered techniques, featuring graphic lines, lattices, crosses, and graffiti to symbolize the complexity of a metropolis. One notable piece, "Je Suis Dans Paris," employs mixed media to evoke an abstract quality, prominently displaying the title as part of its composition.

Ostenrik, an internationally celebrated painter and sculptor, holds a Master's Degree in Fine Arts from Hochschule der Künste, West Berlin, Germany. His impressive career includes over one hundred solo and group exhibitions across the USA, Europe, Australia, and Asia. Filippo Sciascia

Filippo Sciascia was born in Palma di Montechiaro, Italy, in 1972. He studied at the Academy of Fine Arts in Florence and later earned a degree from the Art Institute of Hillsborough, New Jersey, USA. Since 1998, he has lived and worked in Bali, Indonesia. Sciascia has participated in numerous solo and group exhibitions in Italy and Indonesia, including Doveva Accadere I at La Meridiana, Modena, Italy (1998), and Sophia 19:38 at Gaya Fusion Art Space, Sayan Ubud, Bali (2006).

He combines high-tech tools with traditional oil painting to explore how the eye perceives and processes images. His work begins with video films, which are digitally translated into photo images and then filtered through the classic medium of oil painting. This process creates a transposition of video-realistic images into painted ones.
