Srihadi Soedarsono

Srihadi Soedarsono (1931–2022) was one of Indonesia's most respected modern artists, known for his elegant compositions rooted in Javanese culture, spirituality, and symbolism. His career spanned over seven decades, during which he explored themes such as landscapes, rituals, and cosmic harmony. Borobudur, the iconic Buddhist monument, became one of his most meaningful and recurring subjects.

For Srihadi, Borobudur symbolized meditation, balance, and timeless serenity. His contributions to Indonesian art earned him many honors, including the National Award for Contemporary Art (1971) and Australia's Cultural Award (1973).

Borobudur – Moment of Contemplation (2017) presents the Buddhist temple in soft, layered shades of white. The outline of Borobudur quietly rises from a mist-like landscape, creating a sense of calm and transcendence. With minimal color and gentle textures, Srihadi evokes silence, stillness, and reflection. This painting invites the viewer to pause, mirroring the meditative experience the artist often found in nature and sacred places. Throughout his life, Srihadi created only 2 paintings of the white Borobudur, making this piece one of the rarest.

Lee Man Fong

Lee Man Fong (1913–1988) was a Chinese-Indonesian artist known for combining Chinese brush techniques with Western oil painting. Born in Guangzhou, he later lived in Jakarta and Singapore, and his work gained international attention early on. His time studying in the Netherlands helped refine his style, and in the 1950s, he was appointed as the palace artist for President Sukarno, creating some of the most iconic works in Indonesian modern art.

Although he never settled in Bali, he was deeply inspired by its people and culture, which became recurring themes in his work. Portrait of a Seated Lady shows a young Balinese woman sitting on a rock with a soft, contemplative expression. Her bare upper body contrasts with the richly patterned kain wrapped around her waist, and a single flower adorns her hair.

Behind her, a bare tree and a few bamboo poles suggest a quiet rural setting, rendered with subtle washes of ink and warm sepia tones. With minimal detail in the background, the focus remains on the figure's natural grace and quiet presence.

Affandi

Affandi (1907–1990) is one of Indonesia's most important modern artists, known for his expressive and emotional style. Starting out with naturalist influences, he later developed a unique technique where he applied paint directly from the tube and used his hands to spread and swirl the colors. This gave his paintings a raw, textured look that matched the intensity of his feelings.

Canna Flowers (1973) portrays the wild motion and vibrant life of blooming canna plants. Swirling strokes of red, green, yellow, and black bring the flowers and foliage into a kind of visual storm, filled with movement and emotion. The thick paint and gestural lines make the flowers seem alive, almost dancing in the wind. Rather than depicting flowers in a calm or decorative way, Affandi turns them into a dynamic force of nature, expressing vitality, passion, and the artist's direct connection to the living world.

Horse Cart

Horse Cart (1981) by Affandi reflects his unmistakable signature style, using thick, swirling strokes of paint applied directly from the tube. While the forms may seem chaotic at first glance, we can still discern the image of a horse cart moving beneath dense trees, shaped through layered greens, browns, and black. Above, a blazing yellow sun dominates the upper left corner, radiating energy that mirrors the liveliness below. Loose blue strokes sweep across the canvas, suggesting sky, wind, and movement. With its textured surface and expressive lines, the painting is instantly recognizable as Affandi's

Raden Saleh

Raden Saleh Sjarif Boestaman was born in 1811 into an aristocratic Hadhrami-Javanese family in Semarang, Java. He was among the first Indonesians to receive formal artistic training in Europe. His early lessons in drawing began in 1819 with Dutch draftsman Jannes Theodorus Bik and later with Belgian painter Antoine Payen, who quickly recognized the young Saleh's talent.

In 1834, Raden Saleh made his debut on the European art stage by participating in the National Art Exhibition in Amsterdam. Five years later, in 1839, he departed from The Hague to embark on a formative journey through Europe that would last over two decades. He lived and worked primarily in the Netherlands and Germany, where he studied the techniques of Romanticism and mastered oil painting, a medium still unfamiliar in the artistic landscape of his native Java.

Raden Saleh's paintings brought together European academic techniques with a perspective deeply rooted in the landscapes and spirit of Southeast Asia. He became well known for his dramatic portrayals of wild animals in motion, hunting scenes full of tension and vitality, majestic Javanese landscapes, and elegant portraits of European and Javanese nobility. His talent earned him recognition in European art circles, yet he never severed his connection to his homeland.

After returning to Java in the 1850s, Raden Saleh continued to paint and to collect works of art, becoming a prominent cultural figure within the colonial world. He was not only a pioneering painter but also a symbol of artistic exchange between East and West. Through his legacy, Raden Saleh opened the door for future generations of Southeast Asian artists. He is remembered today as the father of modern Indonesian painting and one of the very few artists from the region to achieve international acclaim in the nineteenth century.

Expert Insights on The Painting

Excerpt from Dr. Werner Kraus's Detailed Opinion, 17 July 2024
(Originally published in German, 12 pages)

About Dr. Werner Kraus:
Dr. Werner Kraus is a co-founder of the Department of Southeast Asian Studies at the University of Passau, Dr. Kraus is now director of the Centre for Southeast Asian Art, an independent research institute.

His work focuses on the early development of modern art in Indonesia. He is regarded as one of the foremost experts on Raden Saleh and has published extensively on the artist, including the book Raden Saleh: The Beginning of Modern Indonesian Painting.

"All historical and scientific parameters support the view that this work is an authentic creation by Raden Saleh."

That is the firm conclusion from Dr. Werner Kraus regarding the painting Javanese Landscape with Gunung Merapi and Horseman. His analysis combines stylistic evaluation, historical knowledge of the artist's life and movements, and material-based evidence confirmed through laboratory testing.

This attribution begins with the subject itself: Gunung Merapi, the sacred volcano that dominates the cultural and geographical imagination of Central Java. "The Merapi volcano appears as a subject in at least 12 paintings by Raden Saleh," Kraus notes. But more than just a recurring motif, in the vast majority of these paintings, the mountain is the central theme. It is almost as if Raden Saleh painted portraits of Merapi.

In 1865, Saleh embarked on a journey to Central Java, staying in Yogyakarta and surrounding regions. This trip marked a turning point in his landscape work. While his earlier compositions were mostly based on West Javanese scenes, this new chapter allowed him to capture a broader visual, such as mountains, valleys, and historic temple ruins.

That same year, Merapi entered a particularly active phase. Between October and December, plumes of smoke and ash rose from the summit, and the artist joined a climb to witness it firsthand, accompanied by both Dutch companions and Javanese officials.

Saleh created several paintings of Merapi in eruption, but Javanese Landscape with Gunung Merapi and Horseman reflects a calmer vision. The volcano stands peacefully under a wide, luminous sky. A stream runs through rice fields in the foreground. A solitary horseman crosses a modest wooden bridge, dwarfed by the scale of the landscape.

This composition, with its soft mist and morning light, evokes both the sublime and the serene. Dr. Kraus highlights the thoughtful structure of the painting, noting how the sky and mountain together fill more than two-thirds of the image—similar to classical Dutch landscapes, and to works by painters like Caspar David Friedrich, whose art Saleh likely saw while in Dresden.

Although the painting bears neither signature nor date, its authorship is supported by physical and scientific evidence. The stretcher frame appears to be original and still carries an old, though illegible, label. Most importantly, the canvas itself bears a linen stamp from G. Rowney & Co., a British supplier Saleh used frequently. This same stamp appears on authenticated works such as Portrait of Sultan Hamengkubuwono in Uniform (1867) and Ascent to Megamendung (1862).

Furthermore, pigment analysis was conducted at Art in Lab in Paris in June 2024. It confirmed that the materials used were consistent with those from the mid-19th century. Some of the pigments were rare and of European origin, matching those Raden Saleh was known to use, both from stocks brought during his time in Europe and later imports.

The paint surface revealed an evenly distributed craquelure—an age-appropriate pattern of cracking in the paint layer. “The craquelure on this painting is good,” Kraus explains, “and indicates its age.”

Taken together, the style, historical background, and pigment analysis all come together to affirm with confidence that this remarkable work is truly an authentic creation by Raden Saleh, a timeless tribute to the majestic spirit of Merapi and the artist’s enduring vision.

Excerpt from the Art in Lab Paris Report

Analysis conducted by: Ilenia Cassan, Estelle Itié for Art In Lab, 21 June 2024
(Originally published in French, 21 pages)

Examinations Conducted
- Ultraviolet light observation
- X-ray fluorescence spectroscopy (XRF)
- Fourier-transform infrared spectroscopy (FTIR)

Study Objective
To assess the compatibility of the pigments with the period of creation of the artwork by Raden Saleh (1811–1880).

Summary of the Results
The chemical analysis of the painted composition identified the presence of several pigments. While lead white, ochres, earth pigments, and vermilion red were commonly used in fine arts before the 19th century, other pigments were synthesized and commercialized during the 19th century.

At the end of the 18th century, some chemists, such as Guyton de Morveau, began to propose the use of zinc white instead of lead white, the traditional white pigment which was more stable but caused lead poisoning. Although zinc white was identified in some early 19th-century works, it was used increasingly from 1844 onwards, when it was first produced industrially in France.

Antimony yellow, a lead antimoniate, has been used in painting since the 16th century and was the most widely used yellow pigment between 1750 and 1850, after which it was gradually replaced by chrome yellow and cadmium yellow.

Cobalt blue, a cobalt aluminate invented by Thénard in 1803, was identified, but the main blue used in the composition is artificial ultramarine, discovered by chemist Guimet in 1828.

The green pigment employed is Veronese green, a copper aceto-arsenite used in painting from the 1820s. During the 19th century, the discovery of chromium-based pigments expanded artists' palettes, notably with the discovery of chrome yellow and chrome green in the first half of the century and the commercialization of viridian green, a chromium oxide green, starting around 1859. No chromium-based pigments were detected in the analyzed paint layer. The rare traces of chromium present seem rather to be associated with an earth pigment.

Traces of cadmium were identified in the paint layer, corresponding to cadmium yellow, a pigment commercialized in 1840.

No pigments invented in the second half of the 19th century were identified in the original paint layer. The pigments are consistent with the dates of Raden Saleh (1811–1880) and may correspond to a work created around 1850–1860.

This present report has no authentication value and does not offer stylistic or historical analysis of the work. These elements are left to the expertise of historians and art specialists.

Gregorius Sidharta Soegijo

Born in Yogyakarta in 1932, Gregorius Sidharta Soegijo studied at Akademi Seni Rupa Indonesia (ASRI), Yogyakarta, and the Jan Van Eyck Academy in Maastricht, the Netherlands. He participated in exhibitions in Indonesia and internationally, including in Poland, India, Japan, Norway, Singapore, Canada, the Philippines, and Thailand.

Recognized with several awards from the Indonesian government, his sculptures are featured in parks and plazas abroad. From 1958 to 1964, he taught at ASRI Yogyakarta and later lectured at the Bandung Institute of Technology (ITB).

In Dogs (1966), he interprets the animal form using bold colors, sharp angles, and geometric fragmentation. Rather than presenting a realistic depiction, Sidharta breaks the image into prismatic planes—using reds, blues, greens, and blacks to create rhythm and contrast across the canvas.

Ahmad Sadali

Ahmad Sadali (1924–1987) was a leading figure in Indonesian modern art, known for integrating Islamic spirituality with abstract expressionism. As an educator, he played a major role in shaping Indonesian art education, serving as Head of ITB's Faculty of Fine Arts, Dean, and Vice-Rector. A key figure of the Mazhab Bandung, his works were exhibited in prominent local and international shows, and he was honored with the Anugerah Seni Indonesia in 1972.

Brick Red Blocks and Remnants of Gold is a textured abstract composition by Ahmad Sadali, created in 1979. In this work, bold brick-red forms are arranged in rhythmic rows, with hints of gold and green breaking through the surface. Typical of Sadali's signature style, the painting blends geometry with an almost meditative surface treatment, making the spiritual tangible through abstraction.

Buffalo and Herd Boy

Buffalo and Herd Boy captures a simple yet joyful rural moment. A young boy walks ahead with a rope in hand as a buffalo follows behind, its large body caught mid-step. The scene is rendered in soft, flowing brushstrokes with a misty, light-filled atmosphere that gives it a peaceful and poetic tone. This work reflects Lee Man Fong's signature style: graceful, expressive, and full of quiet emotion. With minimal detail, he brings out the harmony between human and nature in a way that feels timeless and alive.

Basoeki Abdullah

Basoeki Abdullah (1915–1993) was a well-known Indonesian painter known for his exceptional skill in realism. Trained at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague, he rose to international fame after winning an art competition held for the coronation of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. His success drew the admiration of President Soekarno, who became a close supporter and frequent subject. Abdullah painted portraits of world leaders, royalty, and key historical figures, securing his place as one of Indonesia's most respected artists.

Though widely known for his portraits, Basoeki demonstrated equal skill in landscape painting, as seen in Beauty of Nature (1972). The work captures a lush, sunlit valley bordered by dense trees and vibrant rice fields, leading the viewer's eye to a serene lake and the towering silhouette of a blue mountain under a partly cloudy sky. This painting is such a poetic homage to Indonesia's natural beauty.

S. Sudjojono

Sindudarsono Sudjojono, also known as S. Sudjojono, was a pioneering Indonesian artist, art critic, and writer, often hailed as the father of Indonesian modern art. He was instrumental in shaping the art movement in Indonesia, co-founding influential groups such as PERSAGI (Association of Indonesia Drawing Specialists) and Seniman Indonesia Muda (Young Indonesian Artists' Collective).

In Orchid and an Angel, Sudjojono brings together delicate beauty and quiet mysticism. A vase of orchids, painted in rich yet soft detail, sits at the center of a dreamy background that shifts from green to pink. On the upper left, the faint figure of an angel floats gently, adding a spiritual and almost surreal feeling. In the top right, Sudjojono includes a handwritten verse, merging poetry and painting in his signature style.

Hendra Gunawan

Hendra Gunawan (1918–1983) is a leading figure in modern Indonesian art, known for his bold use of color and strong connection to the lives of ordinary people. Known as the "people's painter," he often portrayed market scenes, farmers, and women with a sense of energy and dignity. His works reflect both artistic mastery and deep social awareness, and they remain important pieces in major Southeast Asian collections.

In Under the Sea, Hendra Gunawan creates a vivid, imaginative world beneath the ocean's surface. The composition is animated by a dynamic swirl of fish, coral, and sea creatures, forming a spiral that draws the viewer's eye into the depths.

Dominated by rich blue tones, the painting conveys the vastness and mystery of the sea, while bursts of pink, yellow, red, and green bring the marine life to life with luminous intensity.

Another nature-themed work by Affandi, Kelapa Gading (Ivory Coconut Palms) captures a lively grove of coconut trees swaying in the breeze. The painting is dominated by bold strokes of green, with bright yellow coconuts standing out among the lush foliage.

At the top, a radiant sun rendered in a swirl of yellow and blue becomes the energetic focal point of the composition. As always, Affandi's signature style—impulsive, textured, and emotionally charged—is clearly present throughout the work.

The stylized body is adorned with geometric floral motifs and earthy pigments, while the smooth green face, encircled by a pointed crown-like halo, adds a striking contrast. Lady Wearing a Kebaya is a perfect example of Basoeki Abdullah's realist style. The subject is rendered with such detail and precision that the painting almost resembles a photograph. Heri Dono

In Too Early Become a Hero (2007), Heri Dono presents a surreal scene with three figures. On the left stands a cartoonish, militaristic character—possibly symbolizing the USA—wearing a cowboy hat and decorated uniform, complete with badges and weapons. He appears to confront a central figure: a wide-eyed, grinning head with spiky hair, likely representing Indonesia or the everyday citizen. Despite being in the middle of these forces, the central figure remains carefree and oblivious, embodying a sense of naive optimism.

To the right is another figure dressed in a superhero-like costume, reminiscent of the mythical Gatotkaca. With winged shoulders and symbolic emblems, he seems to offer backup or protection to the central figure. Yet his appearance suggests he may be more illusion than real strength—perhaps a symbol of imagined heroism.

The title critiques premature heroism—a warning against pride or power taken before readiness. Though painted in 2007, the message remains timely. Heri Dono uses absurdity and humor to question false confidence and remind us of the risks in underestimating real-world complexities.

Weaver

Although Lee Man Fong never lived in Bali, its culture and people deeply inspired many of his most iconic works. In Weaver (1955), a Balinese woman sits quietly at her loom, fully immersed in the act of weaving, a traditional craft practiced by generations of Balinese women. Her bright yellow and pink clothing stands out against the soft green background, creating a calm and focused scene. With his signature fluid brushwork, Lee captures not only the rhythm of the craft but also the quiet dignity and strength of the woman at work.

Ju Ming

Ju Ming (1938–2023) was a Taiwanese sculptor known for his bold, geometric approach to form. Working primarily with bronze and steel, his sculptures often combine strength with simplicity, using rough, angular surfaces to convey movement and emotion. Throughout his career, Ju Ming held major exhibitions worldwide and received multiple awards, including the Fukuoka Asian Culture Prize and the Executive Yuan Cultural Award.

This sculpture of Dr. Sun Yat-sen portrays the father of modern China, a key figure in the overthrow of the Qing dynasty and the founding of the Republic of China in 1912. Li Chen

Li Chen (b. 1963, Yunlin, Taiwan) is a well-known contemporary sculptor known for his unique "ink-black" aesthetic that blends Eastern spiritual traditions with modern sensibilities. Early in his career, he worked as an assistant sculptor for Buddhist statues, an experience that deeply shaped his understanding of form, symbolism, and serenity. Since his first solo exhibition in Taipei in 1999, Li's works have been widely exhibited around the world, including at the Venice Biennale, the National Art Museum of China, and the Singapore Art Museum.

Entering the World (2007) reflects a pivotal moment in Li's artistic journey, moving from divine Buddhist figures to more human-centered themes. The sculpture shows a round, black figure holding a golden infant, radiating warmth, innocence, and hope. Inspired by Humanistic Buddhism, which emphasizes the value of human life and earthly compassion, the piece invites reflection on how purity can exist within the complexity of everyday life.

Rudolf Bonnet

Rudolf Bonnet (1895–1978) was a Dutch artist known for his sensitive and finely detailed portraits. After arriving in Bali in 1931, he became deeply involved with the local art scene and helped elevate Balinese art through education and collaboration. Alongside Walter Spies, he co-founded the Pita Maha group in 1936 to guide young Balinese artists. He also played a key role in founding Museum Puri Lukisan in Ubud, where many of his works remain today.

Portrait of a Young Man reflects Bonnet's deep appreciation for the Balinese people. Drawn in 1976, the portrait captures a young man in a quiet, introspective moment. The careful attention to anatomy, the soft cross-hatching of lines, and the subject's downcast gaze create a mood of calm dignity.

Emil Rizek

Emil Rizek (1901–1988) was an Austrian painter who studied under Carl Fahringer at the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna. He traveled widely throughout Europe and Asia, including a visit to Indonesia in 1927, where he explored Java, Bali, and Sumatra. He became a member of the Bataviasche Kunstkring and gained recognition for his vigorous painting style. After his extensive travels, he returned to Vienna and continued painting until his death.

In The Vrouwenrecht Seen from the Water, the Oude Kerk on the Left, Delft, Rizek captures a serene canal view in the historic city of Delft, the Netherlands. Vrouwenrecht refers to the canal depicted in the scene. A graceful arched bridge leads the viewer's eye across still waters that reflect the surrounding brick houses and cloudy sky. On the left, the silhouette of the Oude Kerk, Delft's iconic old church, can be seen. The painting conveys a calm and reflective atmosphere.

Alit Sembodo

Alit Sembodo was a young Indonesian artist known for his strong and emotional visual style. Born in 1975, he received several major art awards, including the Indonesian Art Awards and the Philip Morris ASEAN Art Awards, before his passing in 2003 at the age of 28. Alit often explored themes of destruction, chaos, and deep inner conflict through his art, which still feels relevant today.

In his painting Evolution Theory (1999), Alit takes inspiration from Charles Darwin's theory of evolution but gives it a different and more ironic meaning. Instead of showing a proud journey from ape to human, Alit shows how humans may be moving backward. His figures evolve into thinking, upright beings, only to turn into wolf-like monsters.

Visually, the painting feels dense and chaotic, filled with twisting bodies, crowded scenes, and handwritten notes that rush across the canvas. Through this storm of images and movement, Alit paints a world where people fight, lose their identity, and forget their humanity. With phrases like "choose to die or become Homo Lupus," he shows how evolution can turn into devolution. This piece was also part of Sirkus Politik: Jagad Purba, a posthumous exhibition of Alit's works held at the National Gallery of Indonesia from 23 February to 1 March 2011.

Hendra Gunawan

Hendra Gunawan (1918–1983) was a pioneering Indonesian artist, known for blending traditional themes with modern techniques. Born in Bandung, he began painting in the 1930s, and his painting has been internationally recognized, including at the Venice Biennale 2024. His works are held in prestigious collections such as the Neka Art Museum in Bali and the Singapore Art Museum.

The painting The Guerilla Fighter (Sang Gerilya) reflects Hendra's deep involvement in Indonesia's fight for independence. Created around the 1940s, likely during the pre-war era, the work captures the spirit of guerrilla resistance. At the center are two freedom fighters holding weapons, their eyes sharply focused as they scan their surroundings.

The use of earthy tones like brown and green is not random—these colors suggest the forest environment where guerrilla warfare took place. Hendra's signature style is already present here, seen in the fine yet bold lines, especially in the patterns of the clothing. This painting is not just a scene of war but a tribute to the courage, tension, and determination of Indonesia's struggle for freedom.

Adrien Jean Le Mayeur De Merpres

Adrien-Jean Le Mayeur de Merprès (1880–1958) was a Belgian Impressionist painter who made Bali his home and muse. Deeply drawn to the island's light, color, and culture, he painted intimate scenes of Balinese life with a romantic and atmospheric style. His art merges European Impressionist brushwork with the rhythms and rituals of Bali, capturing a world filled with beauty, tradition, and grace.

Two Balinese Maidens in a Garden is a gentle and graceful scene rendered in pastel on paper. The two women, wrapped in traditional sarongs, are surrounded by soft blooms and flowing lines, as if blending into the garden itself. Their glowing skin and elegant poses reflect Le Mayeur's admiration for the harmony between Balinese women and nature.

Before Departure

Before Departure (1940) is a rare early oil painting by Lee Man Fong, made during a time when he was still searching for and shaping his artistic voice. Unlike his later works in Chinese ink, this piece uses oil to depict a pair of horses beside a wooden cart, rendered in earthy tones and expressive brushwork. While Lee would go on to paint many animals, this work stands apart in mood and approach, offering a grounded glimpse of rural life.

The horses stand quietly beneath a canopy of trees, their bodies calm yet alert in the dappled light. Lee captures a moment of pause before motion, filled with a gentle stillness. His keen attention to light, form, and atmosphere reflects the emotional depth that would later define his more mature works.

Sunaryo

Sunaryo is a highly respected artist from Bandung, Indonesia, known not only for his visual works but also for his role in building cultural spaces. He founded the Selasar Sunaryo Art Space, a key hub for contemporary art in Indonesia. Throughout his career, he has received various honors including the Akademi Jakarta Award, a Lifetime Achievement Award, and recognition from the French government for his contributions to the arts.

In his painting Abstract (2000), Sunaryo uses black lines and sharp angles to form what looks like a dense cluster of rooftops and village structures. While at first glance the image appears abstract, a closer look reveals the outlines of traditional houses nestled together, suggesting the energy and rhythm of rural life. The texture is raw and earthy, with areas of white breaking through the muted background like light touching rooftops.

Preparing for Performance

Preparing for Performance (2006) by Sunaryo captures an intimate moment between two traditional dancers just before they step on stage. One stands in black kebaya, gently arranging the elaborate headpiece of the seated dancer dressed in white. The intricate gold and silver details of their costumes appear textured and almost raised from the surface. Behind them, a bold orange background adds dramatic contrast. Sunaryo's focus on this behind-the-scenes moment highlights the grace and ritual of preparation, celebrating the quiet dignity behind performance.

Born in Meulaboh in 1932, Pirous graduated from ITB and later studied in the United States, where he deepened his skills in graphic design and printmaking. His long academic and artistic career earned him high honors, including the Cultural Satyalancana and the Habibie Award.

He Who Touches the Sky, He Who Touches the Earth, II (White) reflects AD Pirous's spiritual and minimalist approach. Agung Mangu Putra

Agung Mangu Putra is a Balinese artist whose journey from graphic design to painting has shaped his signature style, which is visually sharp, deeply composed, and filled with quiet tension. Born in Sangeh in 1963, he studied Design and Visual Communications at the Indonesia Institute of the Arts in Yogyakarta. Since becoming a full-time painter in the late 1990s, he has been known for his ability to move effortlessly between abstraction, realism, and everything in between.

Banyan Tree (2016) shows a towering tree with thick, twisting roots and textured bark that almost feels alive. The surface is covered with soft patches that resemble moss, giving a sense of age and quiet majesty. Small human figures can be seen in the distance, dressed in traditional Balinese clothing, adding a layer of ceremony to the scene. The deep blue sky, edged with clouds, adds a dreamlike mood. The painting reveals Putra's view of nature not just as a subject, but as something sacred and timeless.

Mochtar Apin

Mochtar Apin was a prominent Indonesian painter, writer, and art educator at Institut Teknologi Bandung. Known for his cubist and abstract expressionist approach, he studied at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris and the Deutsche Akademie der Künste in Berlin, later receiving a Cultural Award from the Australian government in 1974.

In Nude (1965), Mochtar Apin presents two female figures rendered in bold, broken planes of color—blue, green, orange, and red. The composition reflects both expressive brushwork and cubist influence, as the figures are constructed through overlapping forms and shifting perspectives. The figures seem to dissolve into their surroundings, highlighting the artist's interest in form, rhythm, and the complexity of human presence.

In Bird and Fruiting Palm, Chen Wen Hsi shows his mastery of ink painting and his sensitivity to nature. Born in Purwokerto, he studied at the Indonesian Fine Art Academy (ASRI) before furthering his education at the Accademia di Belle Arti in Rome, where he immersed himself in the works of European masters. He then returned to Indonesia and settled in Bali.

Balinese Girl is a luminous portrait that captures the quiet dignity and beauty of a young woman. Her skin glows with soft golden tones, and her features are delicately rendered—arched eyebrows, full lips, and gentle eyes that seem to hold both curiosity and calm. A white cloth is wrapped gracefully around her head like a turban, adding volume and elegance to her silhouette, while simple round earrings accent her look. Arie Smit was born in Zaandam, the Netherlands, in 1916. He studied at the Academy of Arts in Rotterdam before working as a lithographer for the Dutch Colonial Army in the Dutch East Indies before World War II.

In 1956, he moved to Bali to fully dedicate himself to painting and later became an Indonesian citizen. He also taught painting at the Bandung Institute of Technology (ITB), inspiring many young artists.

Throughout his career, Smit held several solo exhibitions, including at the Bandung Institute of Technology, the Honolulu East-West Center, and the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Jakarta.

His contributions to Indonesian art were recognized with the prestigious "Dharma Kusuma" art award from the Bali provincial government. Rusli Rusli (1912–2005) was an important figure in Indonesian modern art. Born in Medan, he studied painting, murals, and Eastern art philosophy at Santiniketan, India. After returning to Indonesia, he joined the independence movement and later taught at ASRI Yogyakarta. He exhibited internationally in the 1950s and remained active in arts education and policy, becoming a lifelong member of the Jakarta Academy.

In Odalan (Ceremony in Bali), Rusli captures the energy of a Balinese temple ceremony using loose, expressive brushwork. The painting is filled with layered colors—red, yellow, green, and orange—applied in quick strokes that suggest movement and sound. Figures and shrines emerge from the rhythm of the brush rather than from clear outlines. Furthermore, instead of focusing on details, Rusli paints the feeling of being there—busy, festive, and alive.

Arifien Neif

Arifien Neif (b. 1955) is a self-taught Indonesian painter celebrated for his expressive, colorful depictions of daily life. His works often carry a romantic, almost theatrical atmosphere, with scenes that feel both familiar and enchanted.

Happiness Without an End shows two women in the foreground, one standing with a bowl of fruit, the other seated and smiling while looking at a phone. Behind them stretches a vibrant Balinese scene, featuring a mountain, temple gates, and a kecak dance in full motion. Using his signature bright palette and decorative brushwork, Arifien Neif blends personal intimacy with cultural celebration, creating a joyful, dreamlike moment that feels both modern and timeless.

Itji Tarmizi

Itji Tarmizi (1939–2001) was a respected Indonesian artist known for his role in the social realism movement. Born in Batusangkar, West Sumatra, he often drew inspiration from the everyday lives, culture, and textile traditions of his Minangkabau heritage. While primarily recognized for his paintings, Tarmizi also explored unconventional materials.

Composition I is a striking example of his experimental spirit. Created using stitched textiles and quilting, the work measures 130 x 240 cm and combines meticulous patterning with abstract forms. Repeating geometric shapes, zigzags, and layered textures unfold across the fabric surface, inviting quiet reflection. Subtle images emerge among the threads, blending craft and concept in a meditative visual language. This piece was exhibited in his 2001 solo exhibition Suatu Kehadiran.

Dullah

Dullah (1919–1996) was a prominent Indonesian realist painter, often referred to as the "Revolutionary Painter." Born in Surakarta into a batik-making family, he studied under influential artists like S. Sudjojono and Affandi as a member of Seniman Indonesia Muda (SIM). He was appointed by President Soekarno in 1950 as the official painter and curator of the Presidential Palace, contributing notably to the final design of the Garuda Pancasila emblem.

Boy with Hat (1976) is a tender portrayal of a smiling boy wearing a traditional straw hat, painted with Dullah's trademark precision and warmth. The soft play of light on the boy's face, his dimples, and the relaxed pose convey a moment of everyday joy.

Koeboe Sarawan

Koeboe Soerawan, born in Malang in 1961, studied at the Indonesian Institute of the Arts (ISI) Yogyakarta and refined his skills in Solo's traditional batik techniques. Known for his use of trompe-l'œil, Koeboe often begins his creative process through photographic research before translating his visions onto canvas. His works have appeared in exhibitions across major Indonesian cities, and he is especially recognized for his recurring Loro Blonyo series.

In Loro Blonyo (1999), Koeboe transforms the iconic Javanese couple into surreal tree-like figures rising from a barren landscape. The wooden textures and stylized forms echo traditional sculpture while the expansive, dreamlike setting adds a metaphysical quality. Drawing from the Javanese belief that Loro Blonyo brings fertility, harmony, and fortune to the household, this painting layers local philosophy with illusionistic depth, highlighting Koeboe's unique blend of cultural symbolism and visual trickery.

Anton Huang

Anton Huang (1935–1985) was a Bandung-born artist who studied under Kartono Yudhokusumo and Barli, and later deepened his practice in Bali, where connections with European artists helped shape his distinctive style. His works blend Indonesian cultural elements with modernist techniques, often exhibiting a rich, decorative visual language.

In Two Dancers (1974), Anton Huang captures the essence of Balinese performance through vivid color and stylized form. The figures, painted in soft green tones with elaborate headdresses, are surrounded by vibrant patterns that resemble traditional batik motifs. The composition is filled with layered geometric shapes and rhythmic ornamentation, turning the canvas into a tapestry of cultural celebration.
