LEE MAN FONG

Born in Guangzhou and later building his life and career in Jakarta, Lee Man Fong was among the first non-Dutch artists to exhibit with the Dutch East Indies Association. His time in the Netherlands helped shape his artistic voice, where he learned to bring together the soft, expressive brushwork of the Chinese Lingnan tradition with the richness of Western oil painting. From this meeting of two worlds, he developed a style that feels both gentle and refined. This quiet harmony in his work earned him recognition beyond Indonesia and led to his role as a palace artist for Sukarno.

Bali Dancer presents a graceful female figure caught mid-movement, dressed in traditional Balinese attire with an intricate floral headpiece and a flowing sash that follows the rhythm of her gesture. Set against a soft, muted cream-brown background, the dancer stands alone, allowing her movement and presence to take full focus.

AFFANDI

Affandi is one of Indonesia's most renowned modern painters within the 20th century. Born in Cirebon in 1907, he was a self taught artist who developed an expressive style known for its swirling brushstrokes and vivid colours which are often compared to those of Van Gogh's.

This style earned him a scholarship from the Indian government and several global recognition such as international prizes, university honors, and having his works featured at prestigious exhibitions such as the Venice Biennale and the São Paulo Biennale.

Cockfight portrays the traditional practice of adu ayam, a form of rooster fighting commonly found in parts of Indonesia. In the painting, two roosters, one dark and one light, are locked in an intense clash.

Their bodies twist and collide through thick, swirling strokes. The contrast between black and white suggests a quiet duality, like opposing forces in tension. Set against an earthy brown background, flashes of red and yellow heighten the sense of violence and urgency.

S. SUDJOJONO

S. Sudjojono was the founder of PERSAGI (Persatuan Ahli Gambar Indonesia) and a key figure in shaping modern Indonesian art. He often engaged with the political realities of his time, using painting as a way to reflect social and national conditions. One example of this is his painting titled No.1.

It's the painting he made in relation to the atmosphere surrounding Indonesia's 1982 general election during the New Order period, when only three parties were allowed, Golkar, PPP, and PDI, with power largely concentrated in Golkar. The scene evokes a quiet campaign moment linked to PPP, where two Muslim women appear to whisper anxiously about the fate of their party. In the distance, faint hints of flags, including the PPP symbol and the Indonesian red and white, appear within an otherwise empty setting.

Rather than presenting a direct narrative, Sudjojono focuses on the emotional weight of the moment. The two women lean toward each other in a tense, intimate exchange, their faces softly rendered and almost dissolving into the muted greens and browns around them. The still, empty setting heightens a quiet sense of uncertainty and doubt.

"Spring Landscape in Jakarta"

Spring Landscape in Jakarta (Pemandangan Musim Semi di Jakarta), 1955, presents a quiet riverside scene where nature unfolds in gentle stillness. A large tree with dense foliage rises along the bank, while a small boat rests calmly on the water. Warm brown and golden tones create an intimate, contemplative atmosphere, with faint silhouettes of hills dissolving into the hazy distance.

A quiet sense of solitude runs through the painting, as if time moves more slowly within it. Today, it feels almost hard to imagine Jakarta in such a state, yet the work offers a glimpse into an earlier landscape. At the same time, a subtle Chinese aesthetic lingers, reflecting Lee Man Fong's ability to blend local scenery with the poetic sensitivity of ink painting.

I GUSTI AYU KADEK MURNIASIH

I Gusti Ayu Kadek Murniasih, known as Murni, was a Balinese artist who began as a domestic worker before studying under Dewa Putu Mokoh. Her work often explores sexuality, trauma, and female identity through simplified forms, bold outlines, and vivid colour.

My Imagination presents two intertwined figures, merging into one fluid form. One body appears in a soft cream tone, the other in green, set against a pink, patterned background. The image feels both playful and quietly intense.

This merging of bodies suggests an inner, imagined space rather than a literal scene. It hints at intimacy and connection, where desire, memory, and feeling overlap. Furthermore, the work clearly reflects Murni's characteristic approach, both in form and colour.

FADJAR SIDIK

Fadjar Sidik was born in Surabaya in 1930 and first studied English literature at Universitas Gadjah Mada before turning to fine arts at ASRI Yogyakarta. His time in Bali from 1957 to 1961 marked a key shift, as he moved from semi-abstract works toward a more complete abstraction, shaped by his response to a changing cultural landscape.

Form of Composition (Komposisi Bidang), 1962, reflects this direction. Set against a deep blue background, the composition is built from rectangles, triangles, and other abstract shapes. Each form carries its own color and weight, yet moves together in a quiet rhythm. Rather than depicting a scene, Sidik allows balance, tension, and movement to emerge through form itself.

I MADE WIANTA

I Made Wianta is one of Indonesia's most influential contemporary artists, known for his dynamic and versatile approach to painting. He graduated from ASRI Yogyakarta.

Buddha (2015) is part of the Run for Manhattan series, Wianta's last artwork series developed between 2005 and 2015. The series draws from the historical exchange between Run Island in the Moluccas, once controlled by the British, and Manhattan Island, controlled by the Dutch, as formalized in the Treaty of Breda (1667). This exchange was driven by the global demand for spices, particularly nutmeg from Run Island.

Wianta expands this history further by connecting it to earlier global trade networks. He references Borobudur Temple, where 8th-century reliefs depict ships associated with the Sriwijaya maritime routes, suggesting that the spice trade had already been active long before colonial encounters. In this painting, the image of Buddha is not only spiritual, but also layered with historical meaning, linking religion, trade, and movement across time.

This work will be included in I Made Wianta's forthcoming catalogue raisonné, scheduled for publication in 2027.

WILLEM DOOIJEWAAARD

Willem Dooijewaard studied at the Rijksschool voor Kunstnijverheid under Roland Strasser and Georg Sturm. He visited Indonesia in 1913 and 1919, creating oil paintings of Balinese dance and culture, and formed friendships with artists Rudolf Bonnet and Willem Hofker, whose works influenced his own. A quiet yet adventurous spirit, Dooijewaard also traveled extensively across Asia, painting in Japan, crossing the Gobi Desert and the Tibetan highlands on horseback during a two-year trek in the mid-1920s, and later working in Southern France and North Africa.

His journeys inspired a distinctive style characterized by strong lines, bold colors, and expressive detail, often depicting the people and cultures he encountered. In 1930, while in Japan, he met his future wife Jacoba. Upon returning to the Netherlands in 1935, he shared a studio with his brother, artist Jacob Dooijewaard, and remained a disciplined, prolific painter until his passing.

TRUBUS SUDARSONO

Trubus Sudarsono was a self-taught artist born in Yogyakarta in 1926 who is known for his realist approach in both painting and sculpture, making him one of the most respected Indonesian modernists. He was an active member of the Seniman Indonesia Muda and Pelukis Rakyat during Indonesia's independence struggle, and would focus on creating works which depicted nature, traditional life, and the beauty of Indonesia's people. Throughout his career, he contributed to major national projects such as the "Welcome Statue" in Jakarta and statues of national heroes.

Indonesian Landscape, 1954 showcases the natural environment found in Indonesia, which is a theme often seen in Trubus' works. From the mountain at the back, the waterfalls and its flowing water, the green foliage, the brown soil, and rocky terrains which frames the canvas, Trubus was able to reflect nature onto art. The soft colours and strokes create a sense of tranquility, as if it was a view found on a misty morning walk, making the painting evoke a sense of calmness to those who view it.

SRIHADI SOEDARSONO

Srihadi Soedarsono was an Indonesian artist known for his lyrical abstract landscapes and his evocative depictions of Javanese and Balinese dancers. His work is marked by a deep sensitivity to colour, form, and movement, and often carrying a quiet spiritual tone. Alongside his artistic achievements, he played an important role in art education. He contributed to the development of Institut Kesenian Jakarta and taught at Institut Teknologi Bandung, where he was later appointed Professor of Fine Arts.

Bedaya Ketawang – The Energy of Beauty, 2012 draws from one of Srihadi's most enduring subjects: the sacred Bedhaya Ketawang dance. This court dance originates from the Keraton Kasunanan Surakarta and is performed only on special occasions, such as the coronation or anniversary of a king's reign. Traditionally danced by nine women, it carries deep symbolic meaning, often associated with harmony, spiritual balance, and the connection between the human and the divine.

In this painting, Srihadi distills the dance into three female figures moving in quiet unison. Set against a glowing field of red and pink, the dancers seem to dissolve into flowing color. The background feels almost alive, amplifying a sense of energy and grace.

SUNARYO

Sunaryo is a renowned multidisciplinary artist and the founder of Selasar Sunaryo Art Space. He studied at Institut Teknologi Bandung and later continued his training in Italy. Although he began as a sculptor and later taught at ITB, his practice grew to include painting, printmaking, installation, and public monuments, including sculptures of Sudirman and of Sukarno and Mohammad Hatta at Soekarno–Hatta International Airport.

Dance Practice (Belajar Menari), 2013, reflects his interest in dancers beyond performance. Sunaryo often focuses on quiet, candid moments of preparation. In this work, two dancers in traditional attire, wearing kemben and batik, are caught in mid-practice. One holds a poised gesture, while the other gently adjusts her position. Beside them stands a third figure, dressed in a shirt and jeans, observing while also helping to correct the dancer's posture. Through this contrast in attire, the scene brings together elements of the traditional and the modern.

Moreover, the painting is defined by its bold use of colour. The background glows with warm tones of yellow and orange, creating a strong and energetic atmosphere. A red sash drapes over a chair, adding a vivid accent. In contrast, the dancers' clothing is rendered in softer, muted tones. This balance gives the painting a sense of harmony while keeping it visually engaging.

In Gold Fishes by Lee Man Fong, five goldfish are seen swimming together, with another one subtly portrayed in the background. Each has their own unique pattern, with tails that are rendered through soft brushstrokes and hints of white. Through these earthy tones and flowing strokes, Lee Man Fong creates a serene, calming scene while also showcasing his eastern influence.

MOCHTAR APIN

Mochtar Apin was a painter, illustrator, writer, and educator at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB). He explored cubism and abstract expressionism, studied at the École Nationale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts in Paris (1953–1957) and the Deutsche Akademie der Künste in Berlin (1957–1958), and later received a Cultural Award from the Australian government in 1974.

In 1946 he co-founded the Gelanggang Seniman Muda movement in Jakarta, where he promoted a universalist vision of art that could reach people from all cultural backgrounds. His years in France deepened his admiration for Victor Vasarely's optical art, which inspired him to create bold geometric paintings. Returning to Bandung in 1958, he joined the ITB faculty and continued to teach while actively shaping Indonesia's modern art discourse.

IVAN SAGITA

Ivan Sagita is a key figure in Indonesian surrealism and magic realism. He is known for his haunting, introspective works that blur the boundary between reality and illusion, often exploring psychological and existential themes.

Girl and Mask (Gadis dan Topeng), 1988, unfolds as a dreamlike scene of multiple female figures in varying scales and poses, their expressions distant and still. A reclining figure anchors the foreground, while smaller figures appear across the landscape, suggesting a fragmented sense of self. In the background, rooftops and a gate-like structure subtly form the image of a woman's face, while strands of hair and suspended forms deepen the surreal atmosphere.

The presence of the mask suggests that what is seen may not reflect what lies within, a recurring theme in Sagita's work. His figures often appear silent and psychologically distant, placed in surreal, symbolic spaces that feel both familiar and unsettling. Together, these elements evoke a divided sense of identity, between the visible and the hidden, while remaining open to interpretation.

"Fish"

Sunaryo is also known for his thoughtful approach to abstraction, often transforming simple subjects into layered visual explorations.

Fish presents an abstract interpretation of aquatic life, where five fish appear in varied and stylized forms. Rather than depicting them realistically, Sunaryo reshapes each figure with distinct patterns and contours. Set against a background of black, white, and earthy tones, the composition feels deep and slightly mysterious, as if the forms exist in an undefined space. Hints of red cut through the surface, adding a sharper, more electric presence that lifts the overall composition.

BUI HUU HUNG

Born in Hanoi, Vietnam, in 1957, Bui Huu Hung is considered one of the most prominent lacquer painters and is an influential figure in the Vietnamese art world. Due to his fascination with lacquer at the age of 18, he spent his youth travelling to remote villages to study the traditional techniques directly from master artisans. He then continued his formal education at École des Beaux-Arts de l'Indochine, and his works are now featured at international exhibitions.

The Young Emperor portrays a young boy dressed in a red fancy traditional attire, which is typically seen worn by members of the royal family. His attire is adorned with gold, from the cloth, headwear, and to a ring on his left hand. The background follows a similar colour scheme, with red dominantly filling the work while hints of gold are present on the top and on the bottom left, portrayed by the scattered gold coins. On his right, a scroll and ink jar is seen, the teal colour also present in his attire alongside the gold.

Through this work, Bui Huu Hung was able to clearly portray an image of an emperor, someone who is rich in wealth and knowledge while also maintaining cultural themes such as the usage of the colour red for good omen.

ARIE SMIT

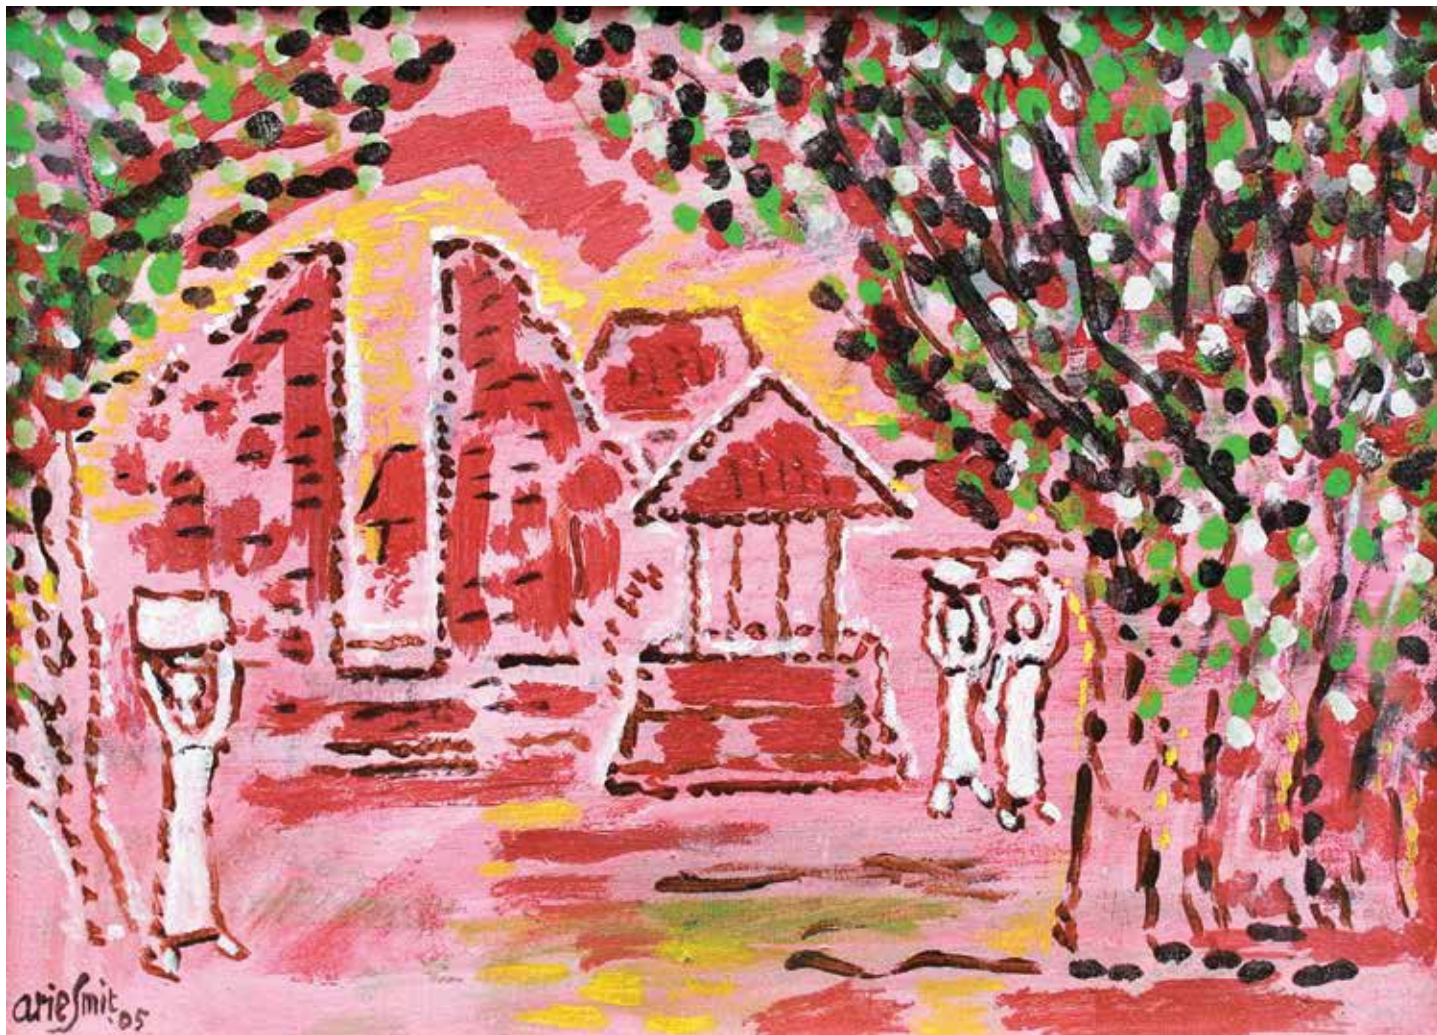

Arie Smit was born in Zaandam, the Netherlands, in 1916. He studied at the Academy of Arts in Rotterdam before working as a lithographer for the Dutch Colonial Army in the Dutch East Indies before World War II.

In 1956, he moved to Bali to fully dedicate himself to painting and later became an Indonesian citizen. He also taught painting at the Bandung Institute of Technology (ITB), inspiring many young artists.

Smit's paintings are known for their vibrant colors and expressive compositions, often depicting the natural beauty of his surroundings. His creative energy was relentless, reflected in his bold use of colors, patterns, and textures.

He is also widely regarded as a pioneer of pointillism in Indonesia, a technique that uses small dots of color to form an image. Throughout his career, Smit held several solo exhibitions, including at the Bandung Institute of Technology, the Honolulu East-West Center, and the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Jakarta.

His contributions to Indonesian art were recognized with the prestigious "Dharma Kusuma" art award from the Bali provincial government. RICHARD WINKLER

Richard Winkler is known for a distinctive visual language shaped by his background in graphic design and his life in Bali. After studying in Stockholm and working as an illustrator, he moved to Ubud in 1997, where he dedicated himself fully to painting. His works often feature soft, flowing forms, stylized figures, and carefully balanced compositions, reflecting a meeting between Scandinavian clarity and the lush, vibrant character of the tropics.

Hills of Serenity (Bukit Ketenangan) and Peaceful Moment at the Plantation (Momen Damai di Perkebunan), both painted in 2024, are presented together within a single frame. The two compositions mirror each other in structure, yet remain distinct in colour and detail. Each depicts a seated, stylized figure set within a landscape of rounded hills and dense, decorative foliage.

While similar in composition, the paintings shift in mood through their colour palettes. One leans toward deeper greens and purples, while the other moves into cooler blues and lighter tones. These subtle variations give each work its own atmosphere, even as they remain visually connected. Seen together, they create a quiet dialogue, where repetition and difference balance one another.

The background of the entire page is an abstract painting by Umi Dachlan. It features a central teal-blue rectangular area. This central area is framed by thick, textured borders of deep maroon and burnt orange. Within the teal area, there are three horizontal, irregular bands of textured material, possibly metal or stone, each containing three circular, metallic-looking elements. The overall texture is very rough and layered, characteristic of the artist's style.

UMI DACHLAN

A key figure in the Bandung School of painting, Umi Dachlan was renowned for her textured abstract canvases, often layered in deep maroon, gold, and her signature purple. Rooted in Islamic philosophy, her works reflect a spiritual connection to nature and music. She studied at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB) under Ahmad Sadali, a leading figure in modern Islamic art in Indonesia, graduating in 1968 as only the third female artist to do so.

In 1969, she broke barriers by becoming ITB's first female lecturer, teaching there until 1999. Over the years, she moved beyond her mentor's influence to establish her own iconography, earning a place in the discourse of Indonesian abstraction alongside artists such as Mochtar Apin, Popo Iskandar, and A.D. Pirous.

Her abstraction distilled forms from nature into symbolic rather than representational elements, allowing religion and nature to become her strongest creative impulses. Through abstraction, she found the freedom to express the sensations of spiritual reflection and the beauty of the natural world.

WIDAYAT

Widayat studied at ASRI Yogyakarta, graduating in 1954, and later continued his studies in Japan, focusing on ceramics and landscape. Over time, he gained wide recognition, both locally and internationally, with exhibitions across Indonesia, Japan, Europe, and the United States. His work is known for its decorative quality, often drawing from mythology and tradition, and carrying a strong sense of rhythm and imagination.

Magical Decorative Abstraction (Abstraksi Dekora Magis) (20), 2002, reflects this approach. The composition is built from stylized, simplified forms that resemble organic shapes, almost like leaves, seeds, or fragments of living matter. These elements are arranged in a balanced yet playful structure, outlined with bold lines and filled with muted tones of grey, green, yellow, and deep blue, punctuated by bright red accents. The painting feels both abstract and familiar. The forms seem to suggest something alive, yet remain undefined, allowing the imagination to move freely.

“Going Home”

Going Home (Pulang), 1973, is another work that reflects Widayat’s distinctive character. It presents a landscape set on a gently rising hill beneath a dense red sky. A large tree stretches across the upper part of the composition, its branches spreading wide, while smaller trees stand quietly in the distance. Along the slope, a group moves across the land, a farmer leading, followed by two donkeys carrying loads, and figures behind them bearing goods on their shoulders.

They seem to be making their way home after a long day of work. The red sky glows like a fading sunset, as if the day is slowly letting go. The scene carries a quiet warmth, where movement feels unhurried and time softens.

EMIRIA SOENASSA

Emiria Soenassa is often regarded as one of Indonesia's earliest female modern artists, known for her independent spirit and unconventional life. Born in 1894 in Tanah Wangko, North Sulawesi, she moved through many roles before fully turning to painting, from nurse and plantation administrator to traveler and businesswoman.

Without formal artistic training, she began exhibiting in the late 1930s and became part of PERSAGI, a key movement that sought to shape a modern Indonesian artistic identity. She continued to exhibit through the 1940s, often as the only Indonesian woman artist, presenting works that reflect a personal and direct approach to everyday life and the diverse cultures of the archipelago.

Violinist, 1958, presents a woman seen from behind, absorbed in playing the violin. Her body curves gently around the instrument, her posture soft yet focused, as if guided by the flow of music. The surface is alive with vibrant, shifting colours, both in the background and across her clothing. More than a portrait, the painting affirms her agency and talent. She is not presented for the gaze, but as a maker, fully immersed in her own practice. In this quiet yet powerful way, Emiria presents a woman who defines her own presence, especially at a time when such portrayals were rare

Dake, and later trained with E. Pieters, A.M. Gorter, and H.M. Krabbe in Laren, the Netherlands. In 1912, he moved to Indonesia, where he lived and worked extensively across Java, Sumatra, and Bali. ANTONIO BLANCO Antonio Blanco was an artist born in Manila to Spanish parents. After studying in New York and traveling widely, he settled in Bali in 1952, where he was given land in Ubud and built his home and later museum. Immersed in the local culture, he married the Balinese dancer Ni Ronji, who became a lasting source of inspiration.

Blanco's paintings often center on women, shaped by a romantic and dreamlike style influenced by Bali's natural beauty and artistic life. He received international recognition, and his works were collected by figures such as Ingrid Bergman, President Sukarno, and Michael Jackson. The Blanco Renaissance Museum, opened in 1998, continues to house his legacy.

Portrait of a Young Girl captures a close-up of a young girl. Her face is softly formed through loose, painterly brushstrokes. A red headband rests across her hair, standing out against the earthy tones of her skin and surroundings. The figure seems to blend into the background, with touches of colour on her body echoing those behind her.

ERICA HESTU WAHYUNI

Erica Hestu Wahyuni (born 1971 in Yogyakarta) is an Indonesian painter recognized for her distinctively expressive and often described "childlike" style. She began painting early, studying under Suharto P.R. and Herry Wibowo at Sanggar Katamsi, and later graduated from the Indonesian Institute of the Arts (ISI) Yogyakarta in 1996, where she received the Best Work award in 1993.

Erica's paintings are characterized by striking colors with high contrasts and often feature simplistic objects like elephants, doves, and children. While some perceive her style as naive, the true depth of her work lies in its meticulous detail and interconnected narratives, which subtly unveil human complexities. She has held solo exhibitions in Yogyakarta and Jakarta and actively participated in numerous group exhibitions both in Indonesia and internationally, including Singapore, the Philippines, Japan, and Russia.

HANDRIO

Handrio was born in 1926 in Purwakarta and began his painting career under Basuki Abdullah. During the Japanese period, he studied with Sudjojono and Agus Djaja at Keimin Bunka Shidoso and Poetera in Jakarta. Initially, his works reflected realism and surrealism, but by the 1950s, he shifted to a semi-abstract style, breaking shapes into geometric planes. This approach set him apart from Yogyakarta painters of the time, who focused on populist themes. His semi-abstract works often analyzed still life objects and musical instruments.

By the late 1960s, these forms evolved into dynamic and complex geometric spaces. In the 1980s, Handrio's abstract style reached its peak, characterized by a masterful use of space, planes, and color. His works from this period convey rhythm, complexity, balance, and a dynamic visual harmony.

HASAN

Hasan was born in Sumenep, Madura, and currently resides in Klaten, Central Java. He is an artist who earned both his undergraduate and master's degrees from the Indonesian Institute of the Arts in Surakarta. With over two decades of experience in the art world, he has established himself as a prominent figure in contemporary Indonesian art.

Throughout his career, Hasan has participated in numerous prestigious exhibitions, including the KONTRAKSI Nusantara Fine Arts Exhibition at the National Gallery of Indonesia and Sepayung Indonesia at Keraton Mangkunegaran Surakarta. His achievements include being selected for the Grand Art Exhibition organized by the Indonesian Ministry of Education and Culture and receiving a nomination for the BAZAAR Art Award in 2010.

For Hasan, painting is not only a form of artistic expression but also a medium to convey his feelings about various issues affecting the world, both directly and through different media. He addresses profound and personal issues, translating them into imaginative and symbolic visual forms such as symbols of monsters, fire, tree trunks, stones, heads, eyes, mountains, and human figures. Collectively, his artworks create a contemporary surrealistic atmosphere.

I NYOMAN NUARTA

Nyoman Nuarta was born in Bali and moved to Bandung in the early 1970s to study at the Bandung Institute of Technology (ITB). Raised in a traditional village environment, his early life shaped his deep connection to nature and the Balinese philosophy of Tri Hita Karana, which continues to inform his artistic vision. In 1977, he became part of the Indonesian New Art Movement, and in 1979, while still a student, he won the national competition to create a monument of President Sukarno, marking the beginning of his professional career.

Renowned as one of Indonesia's most prominent sculptors, Nuarta has produced more than 200 works exhibited nationally and internationally, earning numerous awards worldwide. His major public sculptures include Arjuna Wijaya in Jakarta, Jalesveva Jayamahe in Surabaya, and the iconic Garuda Wisnu Kencana in Bali. Alongside his artistic practice, he founded NuArt Sculpture Park and continues to play an active role in cultural and national development initiatives.

EDHI SUNARSO

Edhi Sunarso was a leading Indonesian sculptor whose monumental public works helped define the visual landscape of modern Jakarta. His major commissions, including the Selamat Datang Monument, West Irian Liberation Monument, and Dirgantara Monument, were entrusted to him by President Sukarno.

Born in Salatiga, he gained early recognition after winning an international sculpture competition in London, which led to a UNESCO scholarship in India. There, he continued his studies and received the Gold Medal for art from the Indian government, further establishing his reputation on the global stage.

Edhi's artistic journey cannot be separated from Indonesia's post-war history. His education was disrupted by the independence struggle, during which he joined the guerilla forces and later became a sabotage unit commander in West Java. Captured at the age of 13, he spent three years in Kebonwaru Prison in Bandung, where he learned languages, crafts, and drawing from fellow inmates.
