His unique paintings show figures that look like mummies, with no faces, covered in newspaper print. These works offer strong, sarcastic comments on problems in society and politics.

Ubrux strongly criticizes how the media plays a strange role in making people feel powerless. He sees the media as a "source of corruption" instead of something that should help people see and hear what's happening. His detailed newspaper print style, which often looks like he used different materials, can also be found on statues, art setups, and even cars. He has shown his work in many places, including a solo show at Semarang Gallery in 2002. He's won awards like first prize at PMIAA, and was a finalist for the ASEAN Art Award (2000) and Indofood Art Award (2002). Art collectors all over the world really like Ubrux's pieces.

I NYOMAN MASRIADI

I Nyoman Masriadi is one of Indonesia's most influential contemporary artists, known for bold figurative paintings that mix satire, social commentary, and pop-culture imagery. His muscular figures, vivid colours, and comic-like compositions create a visual language that is both humorous and sharply observant. His works are held in major collections, including the Singapore Art Museum and the National Gallery of Australia.

Masriadi draws inspiration from cinema, anime, and computer games, interests that shaped him while growing up in Gianyar, Bali. His rapid rise began with a solo exhibition in Singapore in 2008, followed by international shows that strengthened his reputation. He is admired for figurative scenes that place everyday characters in comedic situations while critiquing the pressures of modern life.

Many of his works carry personal stories from his childhood and his years in Yogyakarta, giving his satire a relatable emotional depth. His works are now held in major private and public collections worldwide, including the Singapore Art Museum and the National Gallery of Australia.

MUHAMMAD LUGAS SYLLABUS

Lugas Syllabus is an Indonesian painter and sculptor based in Yogyakarta. He is known for works that reflect the ironies of modern and contemporary society, often blending elements of pop culture, media, technology, folklore, and personal memory. Lugas developed a love for art from an early age and decided to pursue it as a career during high school. He later studied painting at the Indonesian Institute of the Arts (ISI) Yogyakarta, where he earned his bachelor's degree. Influenced by his father and uncle, both artists themselves, he built the discipline of painting every day.

Lugas has participated in numerous international artist residency programs, including in Passau (Germany), Brisbane (Australia), and Singapore. His paintings, often described as poetic and allegorical, draw on everyday life and storytelling. After exhibiting Da Vinci Codex in Milan and Goya's Paper in Madrid, he began to incorporate hidden messages more deliberately into his work.
