Affandi

As a Master Artist, Affandi has adeptly conveyed his emotions with complete and vivid expression in each of his artworks. This is beautifully exemplified in this magnificent piece, 'Banyan Tree,' where the maestro skillfully communicates his feelings by using the banyan tree as a symbol of protection, resilience, strength, and unity.

In the present lot, Affandi portrayed the banyan tree using a palette of black, green, and yellow colors to depict the lush foliage, which covers nearly the entire upper portion of the canvas from left to right. With strokes of light brown and spontaneous lines, the banyan tree's roots are illustrated, hanging from the top to the bottom of the canvas. The robust trunk is central, depicted in deep brown hues. Affandi's fascination with the banyan tree is shown by portraying a magnificent, mysterious and mythical tree as the centerpiece of this work.

The symbolism of protection embodied by the banyan tree is portrayed in this artwork, where beneath the tree, a picturesque scene of people and community with various activities unfolds. On the left of the tree, Affandi painted temples with people interacting and living under the tree. Towards the bottom center, Affandi also painted a hog and its piglets, characterized by Affandi's signature black strokes. As a master in composition, he also painted palm trees and vegetation to paint a beautiful scene. This artwork, created on a canvas measuring 120 x 200 cm in 1972, combines all these elements to establish "Banyan Tree" as one of Affandi's invaluable and large masterpieces. This work is also accompanied by a certificate of authenticity by Musem Affandi.

Hendra Gunawan

Born in Bandung in 1918, Hendra Gunawan is an Indonesian maestro who implements nationalism. He provided proof of his undiminished nationalistic fervour in his paintings. He encouraged potential painters to express their nationalism freely. As one of the greatest pioneers of modern Indonesian art, Hendra's works contain visual elements originating in primary Indonesian societies. He spent his life celebrating his country's and the people's vitality and beauty. As someone who finds beauty in the everyday lives of the common people, he loves to depict the beauty of them and Indonesia's scenery, elevating them to a revered level.

The painting titled 'Papaya Seller' by Hendra Gunawan showcases his distinctive portrayal of female figures. This artwork is intriguing as Hendra Gunawan illustrates a woman vending papaya fruit against a backdrop of a beach scene with fishermen lounging on the shore. The woman is presented in a gentle and artistic manner using vibrant colors that are characteristic of Hendra's style. Delicately, Hendra incorporated floral motifs into the woman's pink attire with darker accents. The skirt fabric is dyed in yellow with a dark brown pattern. The color palette of the woman's attire harmonizes well with the turquoise background, creating a beautiful blend. During the post-independence era, agricultural products like vegetables, fruits, and seafood became the primary commodities of society, symbolized by the papaya in this painting.

Entitled "Tanah Airku," this painting by Hendra portrays a serene rural scene along the riverbank. Created in 1971, this painting was made while Hendra was imprisoned in Kebon Waru Prison. During that time, Hendra was accused of involvement with Lekra (People's Cultural Institute), which was linked to the Indonesian Communist Party (PKI).

If we delve deeper, the majestic mountain in the background exudes a sense of peace and natural beauty with its soft, bright blue and pink hues, which are characteristic of Hendra's style. The mountains and rivers are uniformly painted in shades of blue, complemented by lush green trees on either side. At the right side, Hendra included a banyan tree, known for its sturdy, strong, and nurturing philosophy, symbolizing the source of life, wealth, and prosperity. Hendra also included figures of people under the tree, where they leisurely relaxed and conversed under it. The maestro portrayed them from a distant perspective in a minimalist yet highly artistic manner. This painting allows us to appreciate a beautiful scenic composition.

Affandi's passion for painting Self-Portrait themes is timeless. In his piece "Self Portrait," Affandi portrays a contemplative and emotional image of himself. The passage of time serves as a silent observer to the human spirit's ongoing transformation, inspiring Affandi to capture it in a series of Self-Portraits. Beyond being a mere self-portrait, his work serves as a profound exploration of Affandi's identity and soulful expression. Beneath the expressive strokes, a range of emotions emanate from the master. Affandi boldly showcases his imperfections, unapologetically revealing every flaw within himself.

Trubus Sudarsono

Trubus Soedarsono, a Yogyakarta-born painter in 1926, is renowned as one of the masters of Indonesian realism and was a favorite artist of President Sukarno. Despite financial constraints preventing him from completing formal education, Trubus displayed artistic talent from a young age. He continued to develop his skills as a self-taught artist and embarked on his professional painting career in 1945.

Trubus Soedarsono's artistic style is heavily influenced by social realism, focusing on portraying the daily lives of Indonesian people. His artworks often depict the struggles against oppression and poverty faced by the people, along with the nation's unwavering spirit of independence.

When Yogyakarta became the temporary capital of the country, Trubus established relations with President Sukarno. Sukarno requested Trubus to create portraits of heroes, one of which is a portrait of Kartini that currently resides in the Presidential Palace Yogyakarta. The Dancer painting (1960) in our collection is one of Trubus's cherished works from Sukarno's collection. The painting depicts a female dancer with dancing attributes portrayed realistically, starting from her crown to her clothes. The color palette is mainly creamy yellow, with background hues blending seamlessly with the dancer's poses and curves. This painting is not only visually stunning but also carries a profound meaning. Trubus aims to showcase the beauty and grace of Indonesian traditional dance, while also expressing his admiration for the nation's culture.

His early works reflected the Orientalist style prevalent at the school. Later travels to Europe significantly influenced his artistic direction, inspiring him to forge a unique Vietnamese art form that bridged Eastern and Western aesthetics. Le Pho exhibited his work widely during his lifetime. Goldfish are more than just ordinary pet fish. In Chinese culture, Ikan Mas (goldfish) holds a fortunate significance. According to Chinese beliefs, goldfish are thought to bring positive energy and good luck into one's life. The vibrant colors and graceful movements of goldfish are believed to enhance chi (life energy) and promote harmony and balance. This positive symbolism is also evident in the works of a highly respected Southeast Asian artist, Lee Man Fong.

Lee Man Fong's body of work reflects his deep connection to the natural environment, celebrating the wildlife and countryside of Southeast Asia. As a Chinese artist, his heritage played a big role in influencing his aesthetics and creative principles, with the animals depicted in his paintings reflecting his self-identity.

Srihadi Soedarsono

This piece is a series called Dancer Dialogue combined with an "ethereal figure", a unique concept from Srihadi Soedarsono showcasing dialogues between figures in a stationary stance instead of dancing. In this piece, Srihadi highlights color contrast for spiritual reflection. Titled "Three Women - Dialogue on the Beach," the artwork portrays three women engaged in conversation by the seaside. The backdrop features a blue sea against brown sand, separated by white tones that create a gradient from light to dark. He drew the horizon as always being just one continuous horizontal stroke, because, fundamentally, nature and humans must exist on parallel paths.

The women are distinguished by contrasting colors, with their attire standing out against the background through a palette technique that enhances texture. Fabrics are depicted in vibrant hues like orange, yellow, and purple.

Best known for the spiritually-charged paintings he made while living in Bali, Auke Sonnega's journey began after working as a textile designer in Batavia.

Sonnega mentioned that Bali stands out from other islands due to its unique characteristics. Jeihan Sukmantoro

Paintings with the theme of "black empty eyes" may seem eerie or even impressive. However, art isn't confined to picturesque landscapes, flowers, or noble portraits. Indonesia boasts a rich tapestry of artistry, where each painter possesses unique and distinct characteristics. Among them is Jeihan Sukmantoro, renowned as the painter of "black eyes."

Born in Solo on September 26, 1938, Jeihan Sukmantoro has strengthened his status as one of Indonesia's internationally acclaimed painters. His oeuvre invites us to explore the mysteries and depths of the human psyche through figures adorned with deep black eyes, which have become his trademark. With a distinctive expressionist style, his paintings emit a meditative aura that captivates all who view them.

Jeihan's distinctive theme is grounded in three philosophical underpinnings. First, the black eyes symbolize the mysterious nature of the future, where it remains uncertain. Second, they reflect the political turmoil of Jeihan's era, representing a stance of neutrality amidst the clashing factions. Finally, the black eyes embody environmental problems, hinting at a future where radiation might force future generations to shut their eyes.

Dolorosa Sinaga

Born on 31 October 1952, Dolorosa Sinaga is an Indonesian sculpture artist. Her works often reflect themes such as faith, crisis, solidarity, multiculturalism, and women's struggles. One of her famous works is a statue of a woman holding hands, entitled "Solidarity," which is now part of the National Commission on Violence Against Women's collection.

She also held the position of dean at the Faculty of Fine Arts, Jakarta Arts Institute (IKJ) and is still actively teaching at the same institution today. In the process of creating her sculptures, Sinaga routinely carries out her own carving, welding, casting, and metal casting. She firmly proves that sculpture artists are not limited to only men.

Apart from that, she also challenges the male gaze, which often views women as sexual objects, emphasizing only their aspects of beauty and sensuality. Sinaga is also the founder of Somalaing Art Studio, an art studio that she established around her house in Pinang Ranti, East Jakarta, in 1987.

Born in Cilacap, Central Java, July 4, 1971. He held his solo exhibition in Maestro Inn, Perth, Australia (1997), Harvey's Gallery, Perth, Australia (1998), and City Hotel Melbourne, Australia (2003). He chose to be independent in expressing his feeling and thought while producing and creating his work. He greatly produced painting using woman as his object. Lot. 140. Black and White Imagination (Imajinasi Hitam Putih)

Lot 141. Can You Live From Stones? (Dapatkah Hidup Dari Batu ?)

Ivan Sagita

The piece is titled "Can You Live from Stones?" It portrays the lives of construction workers, also known as stonemasons. Ivan Sagita illustrates them without their tools, capturing the joy of taking a break in the middle of the day, a significant moment for their hard work. Unwinding after a day's work and sharing a meal together fosters intimacy, unity, and mutual support, allowing them to be their true selves.

In its creation, this surrealist piece is more rooted in the exploring of the imagination. Layers of dimensions can be felt or seen within the artwork, suggesting that yesterday, today, and tomorrow each possess distinct dimensions.

For Lot. 140, he mentioned during that period he didn't create many works of this size. Sagita carefully employs a rather intricate technique, meticulously crafting each line to balance space, darkness, and light. He also focuses on the thickness and depth achievable through brushstrokes.

In this piece titled "Black and White Imagination," Sagita captures the grandeur of the human form from a surreal spiritual viewpoint. He portrays the human body as a part of the night, likening it to the sky that encompasses the boundless expanse of the cosmos. Such a theme has the potential to resonate with a wide audience.
