The Legacy of Maestro Jeihan Sukmantoro: A Collection of Masterpieces from the Estate

Global Auction proudly presents The Legacy of Maestro Jeihan Sukmantoro: A Collection of Masterpieces from the Estate, a collection of 73 artworks spanning from 1950 to 2019. This is not merely an auction; it is an artistic retrospective, a rare opportunity to trace the evolution of one of Indonesia's well-known painters. Within this collection, we witness the transformation of a prodigious young artist into a maestro whose signature black-eyed figures have become an enduring hallmark of Indonesian modern art.

Jeihan was an artist of many dimensions, a figure rich with contrasts and complexities. He studied at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB) during a time when the institution leaned toward Western artistic principles, yet he resisted full assimilation into that framework. Instead, he developed an aesthetic that was uniquely his own, rooted in personal philosophy and a deep engagement with Indonesian identity.

His paintings, especially his portraits, radiate a quiet but compelling presence—figures rendered with stark, hollow black eyes, detached yet magnetic, their gazes absorbing rather than revealing. His choice to strip his subjects of expressive eyes was not a just stylistic decision but a profound statement on the unknowability of the human soul.

This auction offers a rare glimpse into the breadth of Jeihan's artistic journey, beginning with works from his childhood in the 1950s. These early pieces were painted when he was just 12 years old. Moving into the 1960s, we see Jeihan as a young student, still searching for his artistic voice. This was a pivotal period, marked by experimentation and internal conflict, as he navigated academic constraints while developing his own visual language. It was during this decade that the black eyes first began to appear—something that would later define his career. These early explorations were deeply intertwined with the political climate of the time, a period of national turbulence and ideological shifts that subtly found their way into his canvases.

By the 1970s, Jeihan's artistic identity had solidified. His portraits took on a more intimate nature, often depicting those closest to him—family, friends, and people living in his neighbourhood. The black eyes, once an element of stylistic exploration, had now become his signature, a lens through which he examined the human condition. His palette remained largely restrained, reinforcing the meditative stillness of his subjects. Over the following decades, his approach continued to evolve.

Moving into the 1990s, a striking transformation becomes apparent—his use of color grew bolder, his compositions more vibrant. While the solemn black eyes remained, the world surrounding them had shifted, infused with more confident and expressive hues. The once-muted tones gave way to an increasing richness, reflecting perhaps a newfound sense of playfulness or liberation in his later years.

While Jeihan is best known for his portraits, this collection also presents a lesser-seen facet of his practice. Alongside his human figures, he explored other subjects, including cats and landscapes revealing a curiosity that extended beyond the human form. Among the highlights of this auction is his 1999 Hajj and Spirituality series, created after his pilgrimage to Mecca in 1998. These works show another layer of his identity—one that was deeply reflective and spiritually charged. The juxtaposition within Jeihan's life and work becomes increasingly evident; he was an artist shaped by both modernity and tradition, someone who embraced personal spirituality while resisting dogmatic constraints.

This auction is more than a presentation of his works; it is a journey through time, allowing us to witness Jeihan's transformation across decades. We see the restless experimentation of his youth, the emergence of his iconic style, the deepening of his artistic philosophy, and the later years where his palette erupted in bold color. Each painting in this collection is a fragment of his story, a glimpse into the mind of an artist who continually evolved while remaining unmistakably himself.

ARTIST PROFILE

Jeihan Sukmantoro: The Indonesian Maestro of “Black Eyes”

Jeihan Sukmantoro (Ngampel, Boyolali, September 26, 1938 - Bandung, November 29, 2019) was an Indonesian artist best known for his portraits with black, hollow eyes—a signature style that stirred both curiosity and controversy.

At the age of four, Jeihan suffered an accident, falling from the stairs of the house where he was staying, overwhelmed with joy at the prospect of meeting his biological mother, who was visiting. This accident resulted in a spinal fracture, which affected his cerebellum. As a consequence of this incident, Jeihan experienced a near-death experience (mati suri) and was required to rest his brain for several years afterward.

At the age of 14, Jeihan took an accelerated Package B course (equivalent to junior high school). In 1955, at 17 years old, he attended Margoyudan High School in Solo. He became actively involved in painting and exhibiting his works after taking a painting course at Himpunan Budaya Surakarta (HBS) from 1953 to 1956, then continued his studies in the Fine Arts Department at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB) from 1960 to 1965, but did not graduate (he dropped out).

His educational background and life in Bandung shaped Jeihan into a consistent and intelligent artist in his artistic development. He connected imagery, symbols, Eastern cultural philosophy, and mysticism with Western analytical reasoning. Jeihan also created sculptures and ceramic artworks, actively engaged in literature, and pioneered the "Puisi Mbeling" (Rebellious Poetry) Movement in the 1970s.

At first, critics dismissed his hollow-eyed portraits as eerie, ghost-like figures. Some even mocked his lack of backgrounds, calling his work strange. But as fate would have it, the very controversy that surrounded his art made it even more sought-after. He held more than 100 art exhibitions, both solo and group exhibitions, in Indonesia and internationally. The value of his paintings once reached extraordinary prices, even surpassing the works of other Indonesian maestros like S. Sudjojono and Affandi.

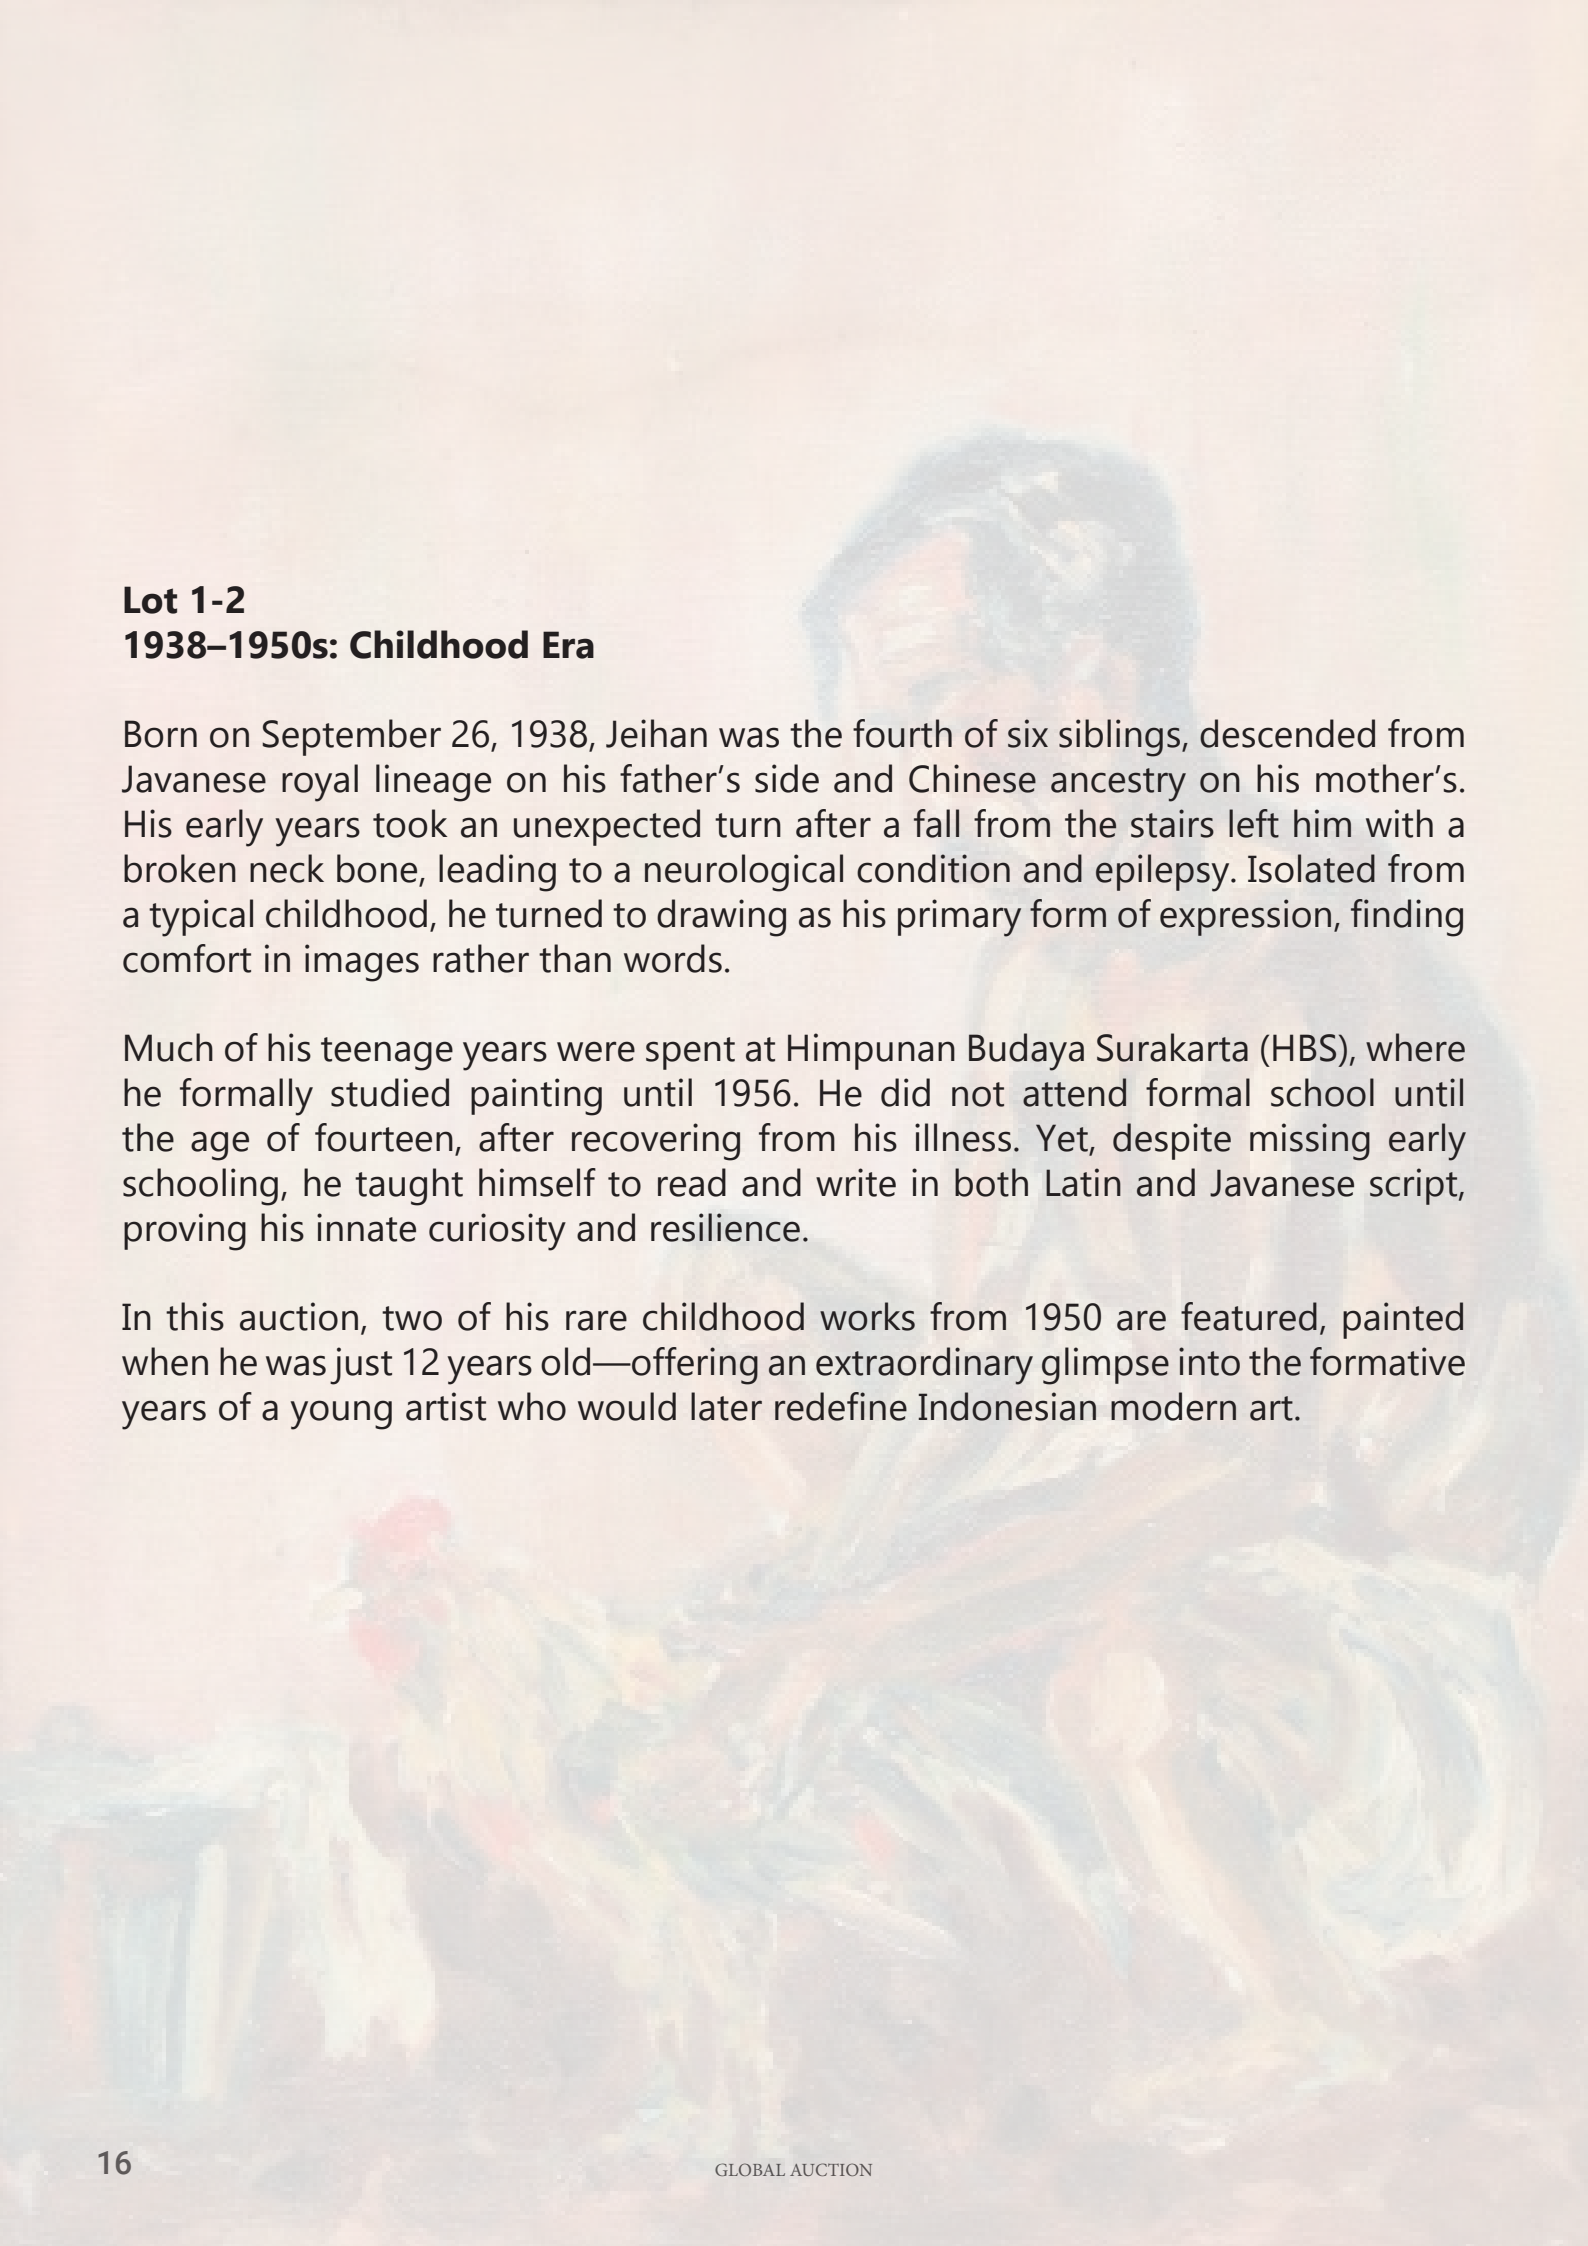

In 1979, he founded Bandung Fine Arts Studio, focusing on art education, which later became Studio Jeihan Art Centre, where he worked and embraced the philosophy of "suwung" (emptiness and detachment).

One of the turning points in his career came in 1985, when he held a joint exhibition with S. Soedjojono titled "Temunya 2 Ekspresionis Besar (Meeting of Two Great Expressionists)" The event, now seen as the beginning of Indonesia's painting boom, saw two of Jeihan's works selling for $35,000 and $50,000—a staggering amount at the time when the exchange rate was Rp 1,000 per dollar, making the paintings worth Rp 35 million and Rp 50 million. Over time, what was once ridiculed as ghostly became respected as an emotional gateway into the human soul, setting Jeihan apart as an artist of deep introspection.

His contributions to Indonesian art earned him numerous awards, including becoming the winner of the Fukuoka Asian Art Festival in Japan in 1981 and receiving the Lifetime Achievement Award at the 2013 Indonesian Art Awards. In October 2014, he made a historic donation—his painting "Yang Mulia 6 Presiden Republik Indonesia" (300 cm x 800 cm)—to the Presidential Museum, Balai Kirti, Istana Bogor, where it remains on display today.

Even as illness crept in, Jeihan never put down his brush. Diagnosed with lymphoma in late 2018, he continued to paint, pouring his soul onto the canvas. From March 26 to July 7, 2019, Museum MACAN in Jakarta hosted "Jeihan: Days in Cicadas," an exhibition that showcased portraits from a critical period in his career (1960s–1970s). True to his artistic spirit, he remained dedicated to his work until his last breath, passing away in his Bandung studio on November 29, 2019.

Lot 1-2

1938–1950s: Childhood Era

Born on September 26, 1938, Jeihan was the fourth of six siblings, descended from Javanese royal lineage on his father's side and Chinese ancestry on his mother's. His early years took an unexpected turn after a fall from the stairs left him with a broken neck bone, leading to a neurological condition and epilepsy. Isolated from a typical childhood, he turned to drawing as his primary form of expression, finding comfort in images rather than words.

Much of his teenage years were spent at Himpunan Budaya Surakarta (HBS), where he formally studied painting until 1956. He did not attend formal school until the age of fourteen, after recovering from his illness. Yet, despite missing early schooling, he taught himself to read and write in both Latin and Javanese script, proving his innate curiosity and resilience.

In this auction, two of his rare childhood works from 1950 are featured, painted when he was just 12 years old—offering an extraordinary glimpse into the formative years of a young artist who would later redefine Indonesian modern art.

1960s: Student Years & The Search for Identity

During his time at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB) from 1960 to 1966, Jeihan explored both Western rationalism and Eastern spirituality, shaping his distinctive artistic identity. While ITB was a hub for abstraction, he remained committed to figurative painting, driven by his fascination with human nature, especially Indonesian people and women. His works from this era reflect a search for balance—between structure and intuition, modernity and tradition.

His color palette during this era was dominated by muted tones and stark black and white, reflecting both his financial hardships and inner turmoil. His past struggles, economic difficulties, and conflicts with professors fueled a sense of unrest, which he began expressing through his signature black eyes—a metaphor for life's uncertainty. In 1966, he left ITB in protest, rejecting academic constraints.

This auction features two key works from this decade: "Siblings (Kakak Adik)" (1963), where the black eyes begin to emerge, and "A Corner of Bandung City" (1963), a portrayal of where he lives at that time.

1970s - Early 1990s: Defining Identity

By the 1970s, Jeihan's artistic identity had fully taken shape. His signature black-eyed figures became more distinct, as he devoted himself to portraiture, painting those around him—his wife, his family neighbors, and the everyday people of Bandung.

His models were often ordinary folk from working-class communities, particularly from Cicadas, a densely populated area where he lived. There is no pretense in Jeihan's work; his subjects are depicted as they are, reflecting the artist's deep respect for authenticity and human character.

During this period, he also explored other themes, including landscapes, though portraiture remained central to his practice. By this time, his reputation had grown significantly. He was actively exhibiting, and his works began commanding high prices, marking his emergence as a major figure in Indonesian modern art.

1990s: A Shift in Color and Confidence

By the 1990s, Jeihan had firmly established himself as a leading figure in Indonesian modern art, with his works gaining traction in international markets, including Europe and the United States. His signature black-eyed figures and female subjects remained central to his practice. Yet, while his themes stayed consistent, his approach evolved, particularly in his use of color.

During this period, his backgrounds became richer and more vibrant, moving away from the muted tones of his earlier years. This shift in color brought a new dimension to his paintings, making his subjects appear bolder and more confident.

1999: Hajj & Spirituality Series

In 1998, Jeihan embarked on a pilgrimage, a journey that profoundly impacted him both personally and artistically. The following year, he translated this experience into a series of Hajj-themed paintings, culminating in an exhibition at Galeri Cipta II, Taman Ismail Marzuki, Jakarta, from April 11 to 30, 1999, alongside fellow artist Hidayat. In this show, Jeihan presented twelve works, each capturing his spiritual reflections and the sacred atmosphere of his time in the Holy Land.

Among these, Bulan di Atas Ka'bah stood out—not only for its significance but also for its record-breaking price of Rp 3 billion, making it the most expensive Indonesian painting at the time, as recognized by the Museum Rekor Indonesia.

This auction presents four remarkable pieces from this deeply personal collection: Jumrah Aqabah in Mina (Jumroh Aqoba di Mina), Sa'i, Tawaf, and In the Holy Land (Di Tanah Suci)—offering collectors the opportunity to own a part of Jeihan's rare spiritual works.

2000s: A Celebration of Strength and Color

Even in his later years, Jeihan remained prolific, continuing to paint and exhibit his works well into the 2000s. His signature black-eyed figures persisted, but his compositions became increasingly vibrant, with backgrounds shifting toward brighter, more expressive colors.

His portrayals of women also evolved—moving beyond quiet, introspective figures to more dynamic representations, such as women dancing, playing music, and interacting with their children.

By this time, his artistic fascination with women had deepened, now focusing on strong, independent figures. As he once said in an interview on September 17, 2012, “You know, women are actually far stronger than men. They possess an extraordinary power that cannot be easily understood.”

As his inner restlessness settled, Jeihan embraced new encounters, new perspectives, and a modernized view of femininity, capturing women not just as muses but as creators, leaders, and symbols of resilience.
