Harijadi Sumadidjaja

Harijadi Sumodidjojo was a realist artist who contributed to the Indonesian Revolution through his art, embodying the ideals of the common people.

In this painting titled People and Taxes, it captures a vivid post-independence scene in Indonesia, reflecting the social and economic challenges faced by the people. The painting shows a group of diverse individuals, including civilians and government officials, engaged in a moment of tense interaction, likely over tax-related matters.

The figures are depicted in rich, earthy tones, reflecting the burden of taxation on the common people. The artist's brushstrokes and dramatic lighting further emphasize the social realities of the time, making this piece a powerful reflection of Indonesia's early struggles in nation-building.

Affandi

Affandi is one of the most prominent modern maestros of 20th-century Indonesian art. In the 1950s, he held numerous solo exhibitions in India, England, Europe, and the United States. He was also a highly productive artist, having created more than 2,000 paintings over the course of his career.

Affandi's "Water Lilies Pond in Tasikmalaya" (1978) exemplifies his signature style of swirling, expressionist brushstrokes. The painting portrays a pond filled with pink water lilies, surrounded by vibrant green vegetation. In the background, there are rows of trees, contributing to the lush atmosphere.

The sky is rendered in a warm blend of light blue, yellow, and green, giving the composition a bright and inviting feel. This piece beautifully captures the peaceful and verdant nature of Tasikmalaya, West Java.

Affandi's painting "The Maestro and Friend (S. Sudjojono)" offers a vivid depiction of the relationship between two influential Indonesian artists, Affandi and S. Sudjojono, who were friends. Their friendship began when Affandi moved to Jakarta and stayed with the Yudhokusumo family, where Sudjojono, Yudhokusumo's adopted son, introduced Affandi to the techniques of oil painting.

In this piece, we can see a fusion of abstract and expressionist elements, though the figures of both artists remain clear. The figures blend into the colorful, swirling background, creating a sense of unity with their surroundings.

The color palette is mixed, offering a vibrant yet subdued impression, featuring greens, reds, blacks, creams, and yellows. Affandi's use of thick, expressive brushstrokes adds spontaneity and freedom to the painting, qualities that define his distinctive style.

Ahmad Sadali

Ahmad Sadali's contribution to Indonesian art is immense. His abstract and cubist styles brought a fresh perspective to the Indonesian art scene. A hallmark of his work is the use of geometric forms and striking colors.

Golden Dot on a Red Field (Noktah Emas di Bidang Merah) exemplifies his textured abstraction. The composition is dominated by a rich, deep red background, weathered and uneven, created through layers of thick paint and intricate texture.

In front of this backdrop are abstract brown-gold shapes that are uneven and not in perfectly geometric forms. Yet, their arrangement feels deliberate and cohesive, creating a visually balanced composition for the viewer to enjoy.

Ahmad Sadali was a pioneer of abstract art in Indonesia. By combining the cubism techniques he learned at ITB with modern art influences from his studies in America, he succeeded in creating a unique artistic style. Like all artists, he drew inspiration from his surroundings, but for Ahmad Sadali, the holy scriptures often served as a profound source of creativity.

His painting Golden Embers in the Sunset Sky (Sebongkah Emas di Langit Senja) exemplifies this distinct approach to abstract expressionism. It features textured gold and copper-like forms against a warm, burnt orange background, evoking the ethereal glow of a sunset. The gold elements, applied in thick layers, give the piece depth and dimension, as though the sky itself is radiating celestial energy.

Hendra Gunawan

Hendra Gunawan was born in Bandung, Indonesia, and began painting in the 1930s. His works are celebrated for their innovative fusion of traditional Indonesian styles with Western modernist painting techniques. His recurring subjects include animals, figures, landscapes, and depictions of everyday life in Indonesia.

In his painting "Under the Sea", Hendra Gunawan presents a vibrant, fantastical portrayal of marine life. The central focus is a large, wave-like structure in the background, filled with colorful fish and sea creatures. These figures are caught in a swirling motion, illustrating the continuous flow of underwater currents.

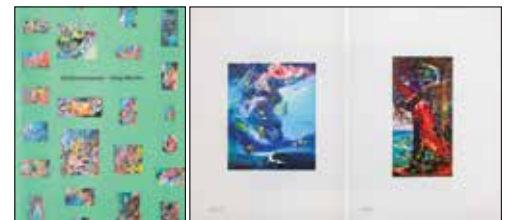

Deep blues and greens dominate the composition, evoking the depth and mystery of the ocean. Meanwhile, bursts of red, yellow, and pink from the fish and sea plants create striking contrasts, drawing attention to the diverse and dynamic marine life.

Srihadi Soedarsono

Srihadi Soedarsono, one of Indonesia's maestros, is renowned for his depictions of dancers, often capturing them in the midst of graceful performances. This is especially evident in his painting "Bedoyo - Beauty of Soul". The Bedhaya (re: Bedoyo) dance, a classical Javanese court dance from the royal courts of Mataram, is characterized by its slow, elegant, and meditative movements.

In the painting, Srihadi portrays three dancers gracefully moving to the left. The black background creates a striking contrast with their white scarves, while their costumes blend into the darkness, defined only by their skin tones and flowing fabrics.

Their hair is styled in traditional buns, adorned with golden ornaments, and copper necklaces accentuate their poised figures. This interplay of dark and light enhances the elegance and ethereal quality of the scene, beautifully capturing the timeless grace of the Bedhaya dance.

Lee Man Fong

Lee Man Fong's mastery in blending Eastern and Western aesthetics has earned him widespread admiration, making him a pioneer of the "Chinese Western Art" genre. Animals frequently appear in his works, reflecting both his Chinese heritage and his deep connection with the natural world.

Among his favored subjects are horses, goldfish, and doves. However, cows are rarely depicted in his paintings, making this particular work an even more unique and valuable part of his collection.

In this painting, rendered in oil on board,, a group of brown cows is shown grazing in a field. Their appearance suggests they are Madura cows, a common breed in Indonesia known for their reddish-brown color and distinctive horns. Some of the cows are standing or walking, while others are resting. The background, dominated by shades of brown, complements the earthy tones of the cows, creating a warm and harmonious atmosphere throughout the composition.

One of Lee Man Fong's signature styles is painting animals, blending Eastern and Western techniques. This is evident in his work Six Goldfish, where goldfish, a Chinese symbol of wealth and abundance, are a favored subject.

In Six Goldfish, he paints six goldfish in white and orange hues.. Each goldfish in his paintings is rendered with remarkable precision using traditional Chinese brush techniques, but with oil as his medium. The goldfish seem to glow, standing out against an earthy brown background.

Below them, rocks and aquatic plants add depth and texture, further enhancing the sense of an underwater scene. The contrast between the brightly colored fish and the muted backdrop highlights the serene beauty of the composition.

Le Pho

Le Pho was a Vietnamese artist celebrated for his idyllic paintings of flowers and women in ao dai dresses. He was among the first Vietnamese artists to establish his career in Paris, with his work divided into three periods. The first reflects nostalgia for his youth in Vietnam, while the Romanet period, named after a French gallery owner, features harsher colors.

In 1963, he began collaborating with American gallerist Wally Findlay, bringing his ethereal works to the American market. His art, depicting flora, fauna, and elegant Vietnamese women, attracted an international following.

In this painting, Le Pho presents a bouquet of flowers in a patterned white vase. The blooms—yellow, orange, white, and purple—are placed on a yellow table against a white background, creating a fresh and lively composition.

Known for his deep connection with nature, Chen gained recognition for his depictions of gibbons and animals, drawing from the Lingnan style. In Two Gibbons, painted with Chinese ink on rice paper, his signature brushwork brings the gibbons to life, playfully swinging from trees.

The black ink, punctuated by delicate pink accents symbolizing flowers, contrasts with the white background, highlighting Chen's mastery in capturing movement and energy, particularly in the intricate renderings of the trees and animals.

Romualdo Locatelli

Romualdo Locatelli (1905-1943), born in Bergamo, Northern Italy, was a prominent Italian painter in the "Mooi Indie" Orientalist genre. After studying at the Carrara and Brera academies, he gained early success in Bergamo and Milan, leading him to establish his atelier in Rome's Via Margutta.

From 1933 to 1938, Locatelli became the official portraitist for Vatican prelates and the Italian Royal family. Seeking new inspiration, he moved to Bali in 1939, where Southeast Asia's unspoiled landscapes and rich cultures deeply influenced his most celebrated works.

In the painting Pastorella, meaning "shepherdess" in Italian, Locatelli portrays a young girl dressed in traditional Alpine attire, standing beside a white goat. She appears to be on a hillside, with a bright blue sky and fluffy white clouds in the background, giving the painting a fresh and vibrant atmosphere.

Arkiv Vilmansa

Arkiv Vilmansa is an Indonesian contemporary artist known for his cartoon character-inspired paintings that feature bold outlines and vibrant colors. His work, influenced by street art, toys, fashion, nature, and subculture, is anchored in childhood memories. Trained as an architect, Arkiv combines a structured approach with raw artistic expression. Driven by curiosity and a love for visual arts, he explores the boundaries of painting across various mediums, including toys, prints, and sculpture.

In 2017, he discovered a formula to control painting surfaces and textures, resulting in his signature vibrant colors and organic shapes. His non-figurative works are inspired by creative geniuses like Takashi Murakami and Nigo. Over nearly 20 years, Arkiv has collaborated with multinational galleries and brands, including IKEA, Volkswagen, ASTRA, OPPO, and ARKIV VILMANSA BAPE. He remains committed to his roots, supporting and cultivating diverse communities through his art.

Eddy Susanto

Eddy Susanto was born in Jakarta. He graduated from the Indonesian Institute of the Arts in 1996 with a degree in graphic design. Rows of Javanese script taken from the text of Babad Tanah Jawi (The Chronicles of Java) define the figures in Susanto's remakes of Albrecht Dürer's etchings. This constitutes a juxtaposition of roughly contemporaneous shifts in the zeitgeist of the 14th-15th centuries – a move towards humanistic Renaissance values in the West, and trade-focused Islamic values in the Indonesian archipelago. The work also exposes the human tendency to exoticize the "other" – traditionally it has been the West who has exoticized the East, but now it is the West that has been exoticized by an Indonesian artist.

Ayu Arista Murti

Ayu Arista Murti is one of the few female artists in Indonesia. Her works evolve around the theme of love and harmony among living organisms. "Nature, in all of her aspects, is beautiful".

In her creative process to achieve an art work, the intellectual thoughts as well as natural processes are equally important. She absorbs things from different sources and let herself inspired by manga comics, but also writings and books.

Ayu Arista Murti intentionally chooses different environment and weather conditions in and around her studio to allow nature directly influence the result of her works. The elements like sun rays, wind or breeze, damp or water, dust or dirt should make an integral part of the end result. Working with many kinds of media at the same time, Ayu will sometimes work under the glaring tropical sun to allow the paint to dry quickly. She will then bring the painting to a more shadowed area to allow strongly diluted paint to spread and dry its transparent layer on the canvas. And these will later on be coloured and modified with soft pastel, charcoal, dust or dirt. And a piece of cloth, metal or wire will later be applied.

Handrio

Handrio was born in 1926 in Purwakarta. He began his painting career under Basuki Abdullah, later studying with Sudjojono and Agus Djaja at Keimin Bunka Shidoso and Poetera in Jakarta during the Japanese occupation. Initially, Handrio's work featured realism and surrealism, but by the 1950s, he shifted to a semi-abstract style, analytically breaking down shapes in a geometric plane. This approach set him apart from his contemporaries in Yogyakarta, who predominantly focused on populist themes, realism, expressionism, and decorative styles.

In his semi-abstract works, Handrio analyzed various still life objects and musical instruments. By the late 1960s, these forms evolved into dynamic and complex geometric spaces, culminating in the peak of his abstract style during the 1980s. In this period, the interplay of space, field, and color in his paintings embodied the construction of their elemental components, showcasing dynamics, rhythm, complexity, robustness, balance, and other evocative imagery.
