Fadjar Sidik

Born in Surabaya, Fadjar Sidik studied English literature at Gadjah Mada University before shifting to fine arts at ASRI Yogyakarta. His time in Bali (1957–1961) shaped his transition from semi-abstract to pure abstraction, influenced by his response to the commercialization of Balinese culture.

A key figure in modern Indonesian art, Sidik was a lecturer at ASRI from 1961, later serving as Head of the Painting Department (1967–1983) and Assistant Rector (1984–1992). His teachings were enriched by his interactions with senior artists like Hendra, Affandi, and Sudjojono.

In recognition of his contributions, the Indonesian Institute of the Arts (ISI) inaugurated a gallery in his honor in 2017. Today, he is remembered not only as a pioneer of abstraction but also as a transformative educator.

Abdul Aziz

Abdul Aziz was born in Purwokerto in 1928 and received his formal art education at the Indonesian Fine Arts Academy (ASRI), Yogyakarta, graduating in 1959. He continued his studies at the Accademia di Belle Arti in Rome, where he studied the works of the Old Masters and developed his skills in printmaking and etching. After returning to Indonesia in 1965, Aziz settled in Ubud, Bali. He brought the techniques and classical approach he had developed in Italy into a distinctly Indonesian context. Throughout his career, he exhibited widely in different countries.

In Prince Diponegoro, Aziz portrays the legendary Javanese prince and national hero who led the Java War against Dutch colonial rule from 1825 to 1830. Diponegoro dominates the composition, mounted on a rearing black horse and accompanied by his warriors. The dramatic movement of the horses contrasts with the glowing sky behind them, built up through deep orange, red, and golden tones. The dark silhouettes of the figures heighten the sense of urgency, while the expressive brushwork captures the tension and determination of a moment shaped by struggle.

Barli Sasmitawinata

Barli Sasmitawinata was one of the important figures in the development of Indonesian modern art and a member of the Kelompok Lima Bandung. He was known for his strong drawing skills and realist approach, with particular attention to the human figure. In Bobotoh II, Barli portrays a Sundanese young man holding a chicken close to his body. The monochromatic treatment draws attention to the gesture and relationship between the young man and the animal.

In Sundanese, bobotoh refers to someone who encourages a person or animal about to compete or fight, and is also used to mean a supporter. The title therefore adds another layer to the scene, suggesting the role of the figure as someone who stands behind and gives encouragement. Through this seemingly simple moment, Barli captures a sense of closeness between people, animals, and local traditions.

Mochtar Apin

Mochtar Apin was a painter, illustrator, writer, and educator at Institut Teknologi Bandung (ITB). He explored cubism and abstract expressionism, studied at the École Nationale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts in Paris (1953–1957) and the Deutsche Akademie der Künste in Berlin (1957–1958), and later received a Cultural Award from the Australian government in 1974.

In 1946 he co-founded the Gelanggang Seniman Muda movement in Jakarta, where he promoted a universalist vision of art that could reach people from all cultural backgrounds. His years in France deepened his admiration for Victor Vasarely's optical art, which inspired him to create bold geometric paintings. Returning to Bandung in 1958, he joined the ITB faculty and continued to teach while actively shaping Indonesia's modern art discourse.

Hendra Gunawan

Born in Bandung, Hendra Gunawan was a pioneering Indonesian modern artist who began painting in the 1930s. He combined traditional Indonesian themes with modernist techniques, creating expressive works that vividly captured the spirit of everyday life.

Known as the “people’s painter,” Hendra portrayed market scenes, fishermen, and women at work with bold compositions and vibrant colors that celebrated the resilience and vitality of ordinary Indonesians. His works have been exhibited internationally, including at the Venice Biennale 2024, and are housed in major collections such as the Neka Art Museum and the Singapore Art Museum.

“Banana Seller” presents a group of figures gathered in a village market scene. At the center sits a woman holding a bunch of bananas in her lap, her body wrapped in a patterned sarong. Around her are other figures, including a mother carrying a child and two others engaged in the scene. The earthy tones and textured brushwork convey both liveliness and intimacy, reflecting Hendra’s deep empathy for the people and moments of everyday life—a subject he often explored throughout his career.

Roedyat Martadiredja

Roedyat Martadiredja, born in Bandung in 1930, began painting in 1948 before continuing his studies at the Bandung Institute of Technology (ITB). At a time when many Bandung artists were exploring abstraction, Roedyat remained committed to a figurative approach, developing a distinctive style marked by the deformation of forms and a subtle palette of tertiary colours. His works were exhibited both in Indonesia and abroad.

Landscape reflects Roedyat's distinctive way of interpreting nature. The mountains in the distance are rendered in gentle layers of blue, while the trees and foliage in the foreground are built from fragmented forms and strong lines. Shades of green, blue, and grey come together in a calm and harmonious composition. Although the landscape has been transformed through stylisation and approached almost as abstraction, its sense of nature remains unmistakable. This balance between figurative representation and abstraction is central to Roedyat's visual language, allowing the landscape to feel both familiar and distinctly his own.

The background of the entire page is an abstract painting by Ahmad Sadali. It features a complex, layered texture with a palette of deep, meditative greens, earthy browns, and shimmering golds. The paint is applied in thick, expressive strokes, creating a sense of depth and physical presence. The overall composition is non-representational, focusing on form, color, and materiality.

Ahmad Sadali

Ahmad Sadali was a leading figure in Indonesian modern art and a key exponent of the Bandung School (Mazhab Bandung). His practice brought together abstract expressionism with Islamic spirituality, using form, colour, texture, and material as a way of exploring inner reflection. Beyond painting, Sadali was also an educator who played an important role in the development of art education in Indonesia.

Painted in 1974, this work is dominated by a deep, almost meditative green, punctuated by areas of gold that emerge from its richly textured surface. The simple geometric forms create a sense of structure, while the rough, layered material gives the work a quiet physical presence. As with much of Sadali's abstract work, the painting leaves space for contemplation, inviting us to slow down and look beyond the surface.

His talent was quickly acknowledged with awards such as the Uriot Prize (1969), Willink van Collen Prijs (1971), Jeanna Bieruma Oosting Prijs (1974), and Arti Medaille (1987).

From 1980 to 1988, he served as professor of painting and drawing at the Rijks Academie in Amsterdam, shaping a generation of artists. His works have since been exhibited across Europe, the United States, Singapore, and Indonesia, and are housed in collections including the Netherlands State, the Stedelijk Museum Amsterdam, the City Council of Amsterdam, Duta Fine Art Museum Jakarta, and the Neka Museum in Bali.

Since 1997, Bali has been the heart of Husner's practice. Together with his wife, anthropologist Tine G. Ruiter, he immersed himself in rituals, dances, and village rhythms in Bali.

Arie Smit

Arie Smit was a Dutch-born artist who spent most of his life painting in Indonesia, particularly in Bali, where he settled in 1956 and later became an Indonesian citizen. Known for his vibrant colours, expressive compositions, and distinctive use of pointillism, Smit drew constant inspiration from the landscapes and everyday life around him. Throughout his career, he held solo exhibitions in Indonesia and abroad.

Painted in 2005, The Village Temple belongs to the later period of Smit's career, when he was already in his late eighties and his eyesight was declining. Yet the painting retains the lively energy that defined his work. A Balinese village unfolds across the canvas, surrounded by green hills and trees, with temples, houses, and small figures woven into the landscape. His distinctive touch can be seen in the vivid combination of colours and the use of countless small dots and marks. Even in his later years, Smit continued to transform the world around him into a vibrant and joyful vision of Bali.

“Boys in the River”

Boys in the River (1987) is a relatively rare subject in Arie Smit’s body of work, as he is better known for his vibrant landscapes and scenes of village life in Bali. Here, he turns his attention to a group of boys bathing and playing in a river, surrounded by lush vegetation, rocks, and flowing water. Although the focus shifts to the human figure, Smit’s distinctive visual language remains evident. His layered use of blue, green, yellow, and earthy tones blends gently across the water, foliage, and figures, creating a unified and lively scene.

Arifien Neif

Born in Surabaya in 1955, Arifien Neif discovered his love for drawing from a young age. At 18, he left for Jakarta with only a small bag of colours and two shirts. Life in the city was not easy, and he took on various jobs while continuing to draw wherever he could. Much of what he learned about art came from looking, reading, and observing. All these experiences gradually shaped his distinctive way of turning everyday scenes into something colourful, romantic, and a little dreamlike.

That feeling comes through in Let's Rock, Have Some Fun. A lively group of people gathers with musical instruments such as violins and cellos, filling the foreground of the composition. Behind them, a colourful cityscape creates another layer to the scene, while a small table with everyday objects adds a more intimate touch. Everything seems to flow together through Neif's bright colours and loose, playful forms. There is something wonderfully joyful about the painting, as though we have stumbled upon a happy moment shared among friends.

Auke Cornelis Sonnega

Auke Cornelis Sonnega was a Dutch artist whose work was deeply shaped by his years in Indonesia, particularly his close engagement with Balinese culture. He arrived in Indonesia in 1935 and eventually settled in Ubud, where the people, traditions, and spiritual atmosphere of Bali became central to his practice. His style developed from an early Art Deco influence into more expressive and emotionally charged portraits. Two Balinese Men reflects this sensitivity to his subjects, focusing closely on the faces and expressions of two Balinese men.

Both figures wear a flower behind the ear, a small but telling detail that connects the portrait to Balinese tradition. Their faces are built up through patches of colour, with shades of green, brown, blue, and orange blending into one another rather than following a single flat tone. The background carries the same treatment, creating a mosaic-like surface in which the figures and their surroundings feel closely connected.

I Gusti Ayu Kadek Murniasih

I Gusti Ayu Kadek Murniasih, known as Murni, was an influential Indonesian contemporary artist whose work explored the body, sexuality, trauma, and female identity. Much of her imagery grew from difficult personal experiences, which she transformed into a visual language of bold outlines, simplified forms, and vivid colour. In her painting He's So Strong (2001), a large blue, horned figure fills the canvas against a striking red background. Its imposing body immediately suggests strength and power, yet the two drops falling from its body introduce a quieter sense of vulnerability.

This contrast gives the work its emotional tension. The figure looks almost untouchable, but something within it is clearly being released. The tears suggest that strength and pain are not opposites, and that even those who appear powerful can carry feelings that remain unseen. The title adds another layer to this reading, perhaps asking what it really means to be strong.

I Nyoman Masriadi

I Nyoman Masriadi is one of Indonesia's most influential contemporary artists, known for combining bold imagery with humour, satire, and observations of everyday life. Drawing inspiration from cinema, anime, video games, and popular culture, he often takes familiar objects and situations and turns them into something unexpected. In 2 Dimension Pants, an ordinary pair of trousers is presented almost like a work of art or a collectible object, complete with handwritten notes describing its size, price, and extraordinary abilities.

The playful presentation invites different ways of looking at the work. The exaggerated claims that the trousers are "bulletproof" and can "fly" add a humorous, almost absurd quality, while the product-like description may suggest a commentary on how objects are given value and desirability. It can also be read more simply as Masriadi playing with the relationship between art and everyday life. Like much of his work, 2 Dimension Pants leaves the final interpretation to the viewer, making room for humour, satire, and personal associations all at once.

Widayat

Widayat was one of the pioneers of Indonesian modern art, best known for his distinctive magic decorative style, through which everyday forms, folk imagery, and elements of nature are transformed into an imaginative visual language. He studied at the Indonesian Academy of Fine Arts (ASRI) in Yogyakarta and later pursued ceramics and landscape studies in Nagoya, Japan. In Primitive Statue, five stylised figures inspired by traditional sculptures stand prominently across the canvas. Their forms evoke the visual traditions of Indonesia, while retaining the simplified and dreamlike quality characteristic of Widayat's work.

Around them, leaves and other organic motifs fill the surface. The layered marks and raised texture give the painting a tactile quality, almost as though the figures and foliage are emerging from the canvas. The subject matter feels deeply rooted in Indonesia's traditional and ethnic heritage, yet the treatment remains distinctly Widayat. Through his rich ornamentation and muted, earthy palette, he transforms these familiar forms into a quiet, almost mystical landscape that recalls the cool and sheltered atmosphere of the Indonesian forest.

Wahdi Sumanta

Born in Bandung in 1917, Wahdi Sumanta discovered his passion for drawing as early as his school years and later studied painting under Abdullah Suriosubroto, father of Basuki Abdullah. He further honed his skills alongside Affandi in Bandung and went on to teach, counting Hendra Gunawan among his students. In 1949, he joined the Saint Lucas Gilde in Bandung and co-founded the Kelompok Lima with Affandi, Hendra, Sudarso, and Barli.

Known primarily as a landscape painter, Wahdi also founded Sanggar Sangkurian in 1975 and held several important exhibitions, including group and solo shows at Taman Ismail Marzuki (TIM) and Balai Budaya, Jakarta, in the 1970s.
